Nixon Endorsed Without 'No' Vote

SAN FRANCISCO (P) - A proposed endorsement of Vice President Nixon for re-election won its first home-state test Saturday without a murmur of opposition.

ment the attacks started on Vice President Nixon. That was expected and we may expect them to continue right

The Democrats know they cannot successfully attack President Eisenhower. It is therefore their plan to tear down Nixon while at the same time trying to put over the idea that the President cannot live out his term of office. It is a natural plan for them to follow-but it is doubtful that they can hurt Nixon more than they did in 1952 or than they have consistently tried to do since he took his present office.

First crack at Nixon, after the President's announcement, was "Why didn't Ike come out for Nixon?" The answer should be obvious. The President would have been acting with poor taste if he took such a solemn occasion to tell the people he was willing to run again, but that he must insist on who was to be his running mate. The President was speaking of his own condition and his ability to continue on the job. Bringing Nixon into his speech would have been resented by millions who were thrilled over the way the President presented

However, it should not be overlooked that in his press conference where he indicated his decision, the President had this to say, when asked about Nixon: "He has my unbounded admiration and respect. He has been a loyal and dedicated associate and a successful one. I am very fond of him but I am going to say no more about it." That certainly should be clear enough to any who question Mr. Eisenhower's thoughts concerning Nixon,

The next question naturally is: How will Nixon get along when the convention opens in August? Will he be nominated for the second place on the Republican ticket? The answer to that was shown in a poll taken of the chairmen of state Republican party organizations. The results showed that the state leaders in 36 states favored Nixon. These states will have 1019 convention votes-357 more than needed for nomination.

Another question naturally is: Will Nixon make or lose votes for the ticket? A lot of people in this state, including some of his greatest admirers, have thought Nixon far the most popular of the state leaders of the party. It is certain he has increased his prestige since taking office. He was then, and before, the target of left wingers because he was blamed for bringing out the Alger Hiss case. He is hated by the Truman crowd because he spoke out clearly about the deep freeze, mink coat and other chiselers around and supported by Mr. Truman. But the resentment against Nixon for this was as great four years ago as it could be now.

The big issue which will be presented by opponents of an Eisenhower-Nixon ticket will be that Eisenhower is a sick man and Nixon not capable to take his place in an emergency. All public opinion polls show the people have already discounted the talk about the President's health. Those polls show that he would be re-elected today with an even greater margin than he had in 1952. It is reasonable to expect that the people who have so expressed themselves have done so expecting Nixon to be his running mate. To these people Mr. Eisenhower and Mr. Nixon have conducted themselves the way the people like to have their highest officers conduct themselves .-

Tiny's Biggest Christmas

MRS. JESSE DAUGHERTY, TINY AND MRS. OPHELIA DOW A Pup's First Christmas Was Probably Her Longest One

This gets pretty complicated, but with a little patience it turns out a small black dog has a name, a home and a license-and all on account of Christmas.

Let's begin at the beginning:

ON THE EVE of Christmas Eve a small beast of Scottish ancestry was found behind a fence by D. M. Dwyer, 760 St. Louis Ave. Dwyer already had a dog and notified the Independent, Press-Telegram that he would donate the visitor to the first caller. The first caller happened to be Mrs. Jesse Daugherty of 2141 W. Columbia St. She took the small pup home, christened her'Tiny and called it a good

MEANWHILE, Mrs. Ophelia Dow, 634 W. Broadway, read in the I, P-T that the pup needed a home. She called Dwyer, who put her in touch with Mrs. Daugherty. It was still Christmas. Mrs. Dow said she would be happy to buy a license asia gift for Tiny. Mrs. Daugherty said Tiny wouldn't need a license until she became three months old. Mrs. Dow said she would be back.

THE OTHER DAY, when Tiny's owner had just about forgotten the offer, Mrs. Dow produced the license money. Tiny kissed Mrs. Dow.

Tiny's first Christmas was probably the longest she'll ever have.

For many years it was known for its murder trials. 'Way back in 1926 and 1927 Philip Goodwin. an unfrocked Greek Orthodox priest, and Dewey Gaines, a former Montana cowboy, were tried in that courthouse for the murder of Joseph J. Goodwin and Gaines, who had been convicts together in the Utah penitentiary, testified against each other. Both were convicted, sentenced to life terms in Folsom.

Red Probers Study Cases of Witnesses

WASHINGTON (UP) - The House Committee on Un-American Activities is studying testimony from 40 former government employes to determine if there are grounds for recommending criminal prosecution of some of them, informed sources disclosed Saturday.

The committee will hold a closed meeting Tuesday to dis-cuss action and possible recomnendations to the Justice Department. Prosecution, if recommended, presumably would be on such charges as contempt or

THE COMMITTEE has heard 30 witnesses at open hearings and 10 in closed sessions since Feb. 14. All were former govrnment employes.

Only one witness, Miss Ruth Weyand, former chief litigation attorney for the NLRB before the Supreme Court, denied that she is now or ever was a Communist, or that she ever knowingly associated with Communists.

AS YOU may have been, 650,000 people walked through the beautiful new Morman Temple in Los Angeles before it was closed to the public a few days ago in preparation for the dedication to be held March 11-14.

As one of the very last of the 650,000, I can say that they all must have walked softly.

There was hardly any evidence, when I was there, of wear on the exquisite carpeting which covers much of the flooring of the immense structure. Even the carpeting on stairs where 1,300,000 feet (many of them L. B. feet) had trod came through, almost unmarked by wear.

And I am told that after the doors were closed to the public, repair of damage caused by the multitudinous visitation cost a mere $200. This was exclusive, of course, of the rug cleaning

THIS is all most remarkable, in view of what happens so often when thousands go through a place, particularly some place of natural beauty, carcless of where they walk, what they do, and where they throw things.

One can only suppose that it avas the nature and purpose of the great building they were the opportunity to see it, that made it different this time.

It's too bad people don't comport themselves similarly when they are in the temple that is the great out-of-doors.

T WENT to the Temple, which is at 10741 Santa Monica Blvd., in company with Jerry S Jacobs, Long Beach electrical contractor, who handled the electrical installation contract on the building, a $500,000 job, beautiful electrical fixtures in the temple, designed specifically for it and produced at a cost of several thousand dollars each. One such hangs in the well of a spiral stairway at the rear entrance, which some have said, because of its great beauty, should be the front entrance of the Temple. Even more exquisite are the units that shed white, glimmering light over the Celestial Room.

I mention the lighting in particular in deference to Bro. Jacobs, who has spent three and a half years directing his structure, of course, is magnificent; with murals of unforgettable beauty and significance symbolize man's progress to Celestial Glory.

Jacobs told me that a similar room in the Temple at St. George, Utah, one of the oldest in the church, has been used only twice.

Faced with stone made of crushed quartz and white Portland cement, the structure stands clean and gleaming on a hill. It is surrounded by fine gardens wil a sweeping expanse of green lawn in front. At the top of the tower is a gold-leafed sculpture of the Angel Moroni.

ONLY one feature mars the view on the approach to the building. .

Something ought to be done about removing the dark, battered looking utility poles that line the approaching street.
Utility poles never looked worse, anywhere.

A Bullet for the Yacht Captain

By Vera Williams

(Editor's Note: This is the first of series of stories of unsolved crimes the Long Beach area. Others in in the Long Beach area. Others in the series will appear from time to time in Southland.)

YHO KILLED Capt. Walter Wanderwell?

Slaying of the world-traveler and adventurer, shot in the back aboard his yacht Carma in Long Beach Harbor the night of Dec. 5, 1932, remains this city's great unsolved murder.

Who killed him and why may be the No. 1 mystery not only of Long Beach but of California and the Pacific Coast. Police detectives, newspapermen, fiction writers have worked on it off and on for a generation. Most of them have come up with theories, and plausible suspects. The only thing is that the theories and the suspects do not agree. Most think Wanderwell was slain by a man; a few think it could have been a woman. Was it an enemy who came from around the world to kill him? Was it someone. perhaps, on his own yacht?

WAS HE KILLED for love. for revenge, for fear, for greed? How much - or how little did a note in Spanish which disappeared from his billfold have to do with his death?

Valarian Johannes Tieczynski, German Pole better known on four continents as Capt. Wanderwell, had been everywhere, done everything — and practically every place he had been, he left

He had faced danger and death in the wastes of Siberia, in Indian jungles, on Arabian deserts and at sea.

Then, about 9:30 that fateful night of Dec. 5, 1932, in a cabin on a former rum boat in quiet Long Beach Harbor he fell with a bullet in his heart, shot from behind. Ten feet away his two small daughters slept, unmindful of the tragedy.

CAPT. WANDERWELL held in his hand a ring of keys as if cash box or a safe. In his wallet in his pocket was $600. A note written in Spanish which crew members said had been in his wallet was gone.

His wife, the beauteous blond Aloha, was said to be in Hollywood at that time. Many crew members were ashore.

Those left on board said a man in a gray overcoat with the collar turned up and a cap pulled over his eyes, stopped at the mess room porthole.

"Is Capt. Wanderwell here?" he asked.

HE WAS DIRECTED to the captain's quarters. They heard his footsteps on the deck; they heard the door open; they heard Wanderwell say "Hello!" in a tone, not of fear, but of some surprise.

Shortly, a shot rang out. They rushed to the captain's quarters. They gray-coated stranger was gone. Capt. Wanderwell was

A dragnet promptly was put out for William J. (Curly) Guy, 24-year-old Welsh soldier of fortune who recently had trouble with Wanderwell in a Los Angeles apartment. They had had a violent argument, it was said, because Wanderwell had put Guy and Guy's young wife off a Wanderwell ship in Panama a year or so before and Guy wanted his passage money back.

GUY WAS LOCATED in a deserted house and was brought to trial — the only one who ever was tried for the Wanderwell killing.

A personable young man with curly black hair, a nice smile and deferential manners, Guy

THE FOLLOWING October. Capt. Wanderwell bought her for $2,500 at a marshal's sale and despite warnings by navigation authorities that she was unseaworthy fitted her up for a cruise to the South Seas.

A "crew" was recruited, plus Capt. Wanderwell and his wife, Aloha, on a part-work, part-pay basis, and they expected to leave in mid-December for Honolulu, the first leg of the South Seas trip. The vessel was lettered, "International Police R. E." Nobody remembers what "R. E." meant but the rest was part of Wanderwell's dream of organizing an international police force.

This "crew" included:

MILD-MANNERED, bespectacled Mel Lincoln, senior curator of the Los Angeles County Museum, is a man whom Davy Crockett would have envied. Davy is credited with some mighty tall yarns about his prowess as a bear stalker, but he never brought home a threequarter ton, 8-foot, 8-inch high brain to prove them. In fact, he probably would have denied

But Linceln is one up on Crockett there. Not only did he face a brown benemoth of those dimensions on Kodiak Island, Alaska, recently, but he brought the critter back to Los Angeles as evidence. > The tale of Tremendous Teddy and how he became a Southland celebrity began more than 20 years ago. In 1934 the Los Angeles County Museum decided to feature, as major attractions, spectacular dioramic displays showing mounted animals, birds and reptiles in natural poses amic authentic, realistic settings of their particular habitats. Researchers, scenic artists. lighting experts, skilled taxidermists and zoologists worked to make the displays as speciacular as any to be seen anywhere.

"WE HAD MANY fine animal specimens when the work started," curator Lincoln recalls, "and as time went on we obtained more. But in planning the Alaskan habitat group we found ourselves literally bear. "

The museum acquired three fine mounted Alaskan Kodiaks a female specimen and two cubs - but no giant male, which is the spectacular member of the Rodiak species. The "family group" remained incomplete.

"There are only about 5.000 giant Kodiaks left alive in the world." Lincoln explains, "and very few mounted specimens available anywhere. We wanted a big fellow at least eight feet tail so we decided to wait until we could secure a specimen that would be a real attention getter."

Years passed and the museum's animal displays became world renowned for their lifelike beauty and authenticity of setting. Lincoln, however, was not satisfied. He still wanted a king size "papa" Rediak for his husbandless mama bear and her two fa-

Then, early in 1952, curator Lincoln arranged with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to lead a hunting engedition into one of the Alaskan brown bear's last surviving strongholds, Kodiak Island, in the hinterlands of the

THIS FORMIDABLE, bleak island is a 100-mile-long by 10 to 60-mile-wide Federal Wildlife Refuge where giant Kodiaks are protected by government wardens. Some of these enormous animals - the Kodiak is the largest carnivorous beast on earth - reach a height of nearly 10 feet when standing erect, and the weight of one of these bruins sometimes exceeds 2,000 pounds, according to unofficial estimates.

The Los Angeles County Museum expedition, headed by curator Lincoln, includel Herman T. Beck, the institution's taxidermist; J. Robert Sewell, background artist, who took color photos and made sketches of the bear's habitat, and Roy R. Linsley, U. S. Fish and Wildlife biologist, of Juneau, Alaska.

Setting up a camp on Kodiak Island in early May 1952, the group spent several days exploring the area, making photos and sketches and observing Alaskan wildlife in its natural state. They also kept a sharp eye out for Rodiak bears, too, partly because they hoped to spot a likely specimen for the museum and partly because the animal is a ferocious giant that can - and will - attack any invader of his bailiwick. whether it be human or animal, with ruthless, lethal intent.

"A KODIAK'S strength is almost untellevable." Lincoln declares. His powerful laws can snap a 2x4 timber in two like a toothpick, and his saber-like claws can slash a man to ribbons within a minute. Then one day as Lincoln. Beck and Sewell were returning to camp from a field trip without Linsley, who was scouting on his own, they shared an adventure that none of them will ever for-

"WE WERE plodding through a stand of four-foot-high tundra grass when we heard a lowpitched grunt ahead of us. Presently a huge male Kodiak began to rise on his hind legs, not 20 feet away, and glared at us. That critter rose higher and higher until his massive head seemed to touch the sky. He looked as tall as a three-story building, with bulk to match. Stunned at the spectacle, we froze in our tracks, looked at each other and then at our 'armament," consisting of two miniature cameras, a pair of binoculars and a sketch pad with drawing pencil!

"We looked around wildly for a tree, knowing that Kediaks can't climb trees when full grown. There was a tree - just a little one - in sight. But as luck would have it, that danged tree was between us and the

"It didn't take long to decide. We made for that tree like Olympic sprinters. I was bringing up the rear and, in the headlong dash, my foot caught in a root and I fell flat on my face. I don't recall getting up but I guess I didn't besitate because I still beat Sewell and Beck to that tree.

"MEANWHILE, THE bear just stood still, ears back, huge jaws agape. As we plunged toward him hellbent for the Frotecting branches of the tree, he looked at us in amazement. APparently he thought he was being attacked by a tric of strange

Dentures FIRST, money LATER, at Dr. Campbell's for over 20 years

Difficult cases invited with NO MONEY DOWN

Putting service first and money later has been at Dr. Campbell's for over 20 years, but never more than right now. Even difficult cases are welcomed on Dr. Campbell's no money down credit plan. You get your new dentures, but may wait 45 days before paying anything. Dr. Campbell carries his own credit, with no outside financing, so he is not regulated by ordinary credit standards.

"I prefer that you get your dentures on credit," Dr. Campbell said. "We want to serve you first, and the money is secondary. Take as long as you need to pay on my easy-credit

Why Dr. Campbell says pay NO MONEY DOWN

'I don't have to worry about paying penses as a dentist if I am interested first in giving service," Dr. Campbell said. "I have found through trial and error that every one of my offices must give a lot of credit to be prosperous. In the past, when one of my offices curtailed credit, this office became less prosperous. People are glad to pay for good service when you are thinking of them before the money. My records prove that insisting on immediate cash, even in small amounts, hurts my dental practice. No money down helps my dental practice."

LOW PRICES BRING BIG DENTURE SAVINGS

Dr. Campbell's twelve offices make a lot of dentures. The story of volume production is well known to everyone. We have many things we could not have if it were not for volume production. If it costs Dr. Campbell less to make dentures in volume, it stands to reason

"My low prices and no money down credit plan enable me to hold prices down despite rises in salaries and materials." Dr. Campbell said. "By not taking advantage of the trend to increase prices. I make more dentures and still make a profit at no increase in price. Living costs have gone up a lot, but my prices are the same as they were years ago."

When you go in to buy something at a department store you see the article tagged with a price. That way you know it's not a bargaining proposition. You don't have to be a good bargainer to get a good price.

One Man's Castle

By Jack B. Kemmerer

MAN'S HOME is his eastle."

Cabot Yerxa, 75-year-old desert artist, is a firm believer of the old adage, and has built part of his soul into the thick adobe walls and massive timbers of his "castle" rising like a magician's handiwork amid the greasewood and boulders of the barren countryside.

For nine years he has been constructing one of the most fantastic structures in the American desert. The castle, growing out of a hill of the San Gorgonio Mountains in Desert Hot Springs, near Palm Springs, follows the architecture of the Hopi Indians, Already, 30 rooms have materialized under the roofs rising on many levels. Already, five fireplaces and numerous rock walls have been fashioned for comfortable living. Outside, Yerxa is still digging foundations and erecting walls for more rooms, even he doesn't know how many rooms the house will have. At 75 his ambition is boundless, and his determination equals his physical prowess, which is amazing.

DESCENDED FROM JOHN CABOT, discoverer of Newfoundland, he has had the same roving temperament as his illustrious forefather. Leaving home at the age of 17, he went to Alaska, and on to an adventurous career that carried him all over the world.

Arriving in Palm Springs in 1913, Yerxa led a rugged life in the desert wastelands. "My home then," he relates, "was just a hole dug in a clay bank, with a few palm leaves overhead. It had no floor, no doors or windows, no bed, no table. I ate and slept on the ground in all weather."

Out of that first home grew his desire for a big house like the Hopi Indians built. The rooms of this new structure are of every conceivable shape and size. Every window is different-a study in patterns and angles.

HE SEARCHED THE DESERT far and wide for old timbers and ties to give an authentically antique appearance to his house.

"It'll look 100 years old when I get it done," Yerxa boasts,

Primarily, the house is intended to be an art gallery and a museum. Yerxa intends to install his collection of paintings in it. his specialty being portraits of Indians.

Yerxa is credited with discovering the first hot well in Desert Hot Springs, a 132-degree marvel, close to a cold well,

He stood in a deep hole in buckets of cold water to keep the rising hot water from scalding him as he completed the digging of the shaft. Both the hot and cold well are located in the kitchen of his new home.

Now, as he contentedly milks his goat and looks proudly at his house rising with Hopi charm in the midst of the desert, Cabot Yerxa says quietly, "No hurry, plenty of time."

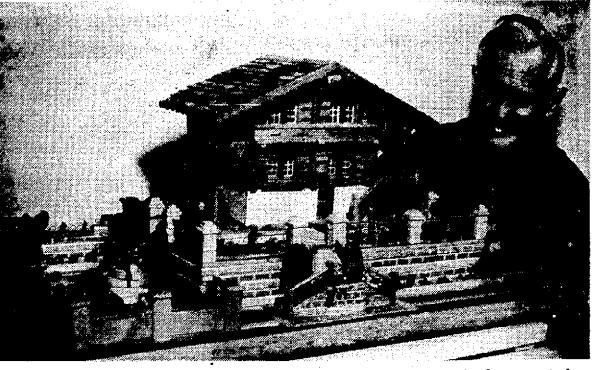

Thirty rooms have already materialized in this house but Yerxa pours more foundations, hasn't set limit.

Cabot Yerxa is capping a life of adventure by building an adobe castle in the desert, modeling it after the Hopi Indians' method of architecture.

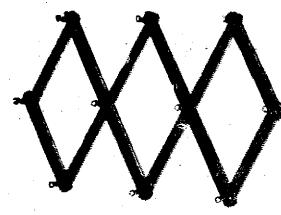

A summer house serves Yerxa for outdoor-style dining. His Hopi castle is seen in the background. Yerxa, at 75, builds with boundless energy.

When Louis Lagler began hoarding cigar boxes a decade ago, he had in mind building this miniature Swiss chalet. Lagler, retired, is an active hobbyist.

WHAT'S YOUR HOBBY?

Beauty from Discards

By Ellen Saunders

CRANDMA MOSES and Louis Lagler, 736 Loma Vista Dr., have a great deal in common. Each has carved a new career out of childhood memories. Not that Lagler, a 60-year-old exrancher has achieved the fame of Grandma Moses but ever since he sculptured a gleaming white castle from plaster of Paris and constructed a Swiss chalet from discarded eigar boxes two years ago, enough miniature golf course owners have requested that he beautify their greens with similiar structures to bring him out of retirement.

This development is no surprise to many Long Beach residents who already know the Swiss-born Lagler as a top-notch bone carver who can transform shank bones into exquisite cameos, rangs and brooches the rich cream color of old ivory. To them it is just one more example of this self taught artist's ability to produce beauty with the aid of a few simple tools and a minimum amount of cash.

A FILE, pen knife, hacksaw, vise, sandpaper and a carborundum saw completes Lagler's equipment. The small cash outlay he requires is due to his ability to utilize commonplace and cast-off material. For instance he has built many medieval Swiss castles in miniature from discarded fire bricks by halving their heat-blackened exteriors and using the undamaged side for the facing of the structures.

His two-storied Swiss chalet, exact replica of his childhood home, complete even to the same old-fashioned, hand shingled roof, is built almost entirely from mahogany obtained from eigar, boxes he has hoarded for over a decade. Broken bits of flagstone and slate were used in making the large patio and terrace which surrounds the chalet. Strips of used tin soldered together made the iron railings and the grill.

AMERICAN EAGLES which adorn each of the three gates were hammered out of old copper pipe. Field stones furnish the pillars which support the iron railings. Lagler picked them up in the Palos Verdes hills-exposed their bright yellow centers with his carborundum sawthen cut them into colorful blocks. The small benches scattered throughout the patio are actually pieces of stone which closely resemble marble. The green shrubbery is inexpensive reindeer moss imported from Norway and the bright red flowers are Everlastings.

Second-hand stores are treasure houses to a man with Lagler's imagination, but not all his purchases are used to build chalets and castles. A plaster of paris mold which he has made from a piece of broken sculpture, has produced a highly decorative lamp much of whose beauty is due to Lagler's skill in reconstructing the design of the original piece.

CURRENTLY he is turning out plaster of paris busts depicting the head and shoulders of a man and woman in 19th century attire. These graceful figures finished in bronze, enamel and shellac in colors ranging from ivory to gold bear little resemblance to the cracked yellowpainted busts which Lagler first repaired then used as models for the original molds.

Most of these articles will gather dust in Lagler's workshop just as Grandma Moses' early paintings cluttered up her attic for years. That's all right with Lagler. He just doesn't intend to let the demands of his new activity deprive him of the satisfaction he has always gained from restoring beauty to seemingly worthless material just for the sheer joy of accomplishment.

Vows Help on 'Tin Can Beach' Park

HUNTINGTON BEACH—Support of the Huntington Beach Orange County demand for early action by the Legislature on acquisition of Bolsa Chica strand for a state park was pledged Saturday by Director DeWitt Nelson of the State Department of Natural Resources.

He wrote Secretary William H. Gallienne, of the Huntington Beach Chamber of Commerce, that the county's proposals for acquiring more beach frontages for public use are "very logical and well balanced."

Besides acquiring Bolsa Chica strand, commonly called "Tir Can Beach" because of its littered condition, the county boosters proposed acquisition of about 3,600 feet of San Clemente strand, about 1,500 feet of beach to enlarge Doheny Beach State Fark, and a Dana Point bluff and beach site.

BOLSA CIUCA purchase would involve slightly less than $1,000,000 for the three-mile stretch between Huntington Beach and Sunset Beach, If additional acreage was bought inland on the Bolsa Chica Gun Club site at least $350,000 more would be needed.

Orange County, which supplies 80 per cent of the tidelands oil revenues which the State uses to buy heaches and parks, has served notice that it will not match any leest funds on the purchases any property in this

Although injured when his nuto crashed early Saturday into a light standard, Scaman Arlon E. Cook, 21, of the USS Bremerton, hitchhiked to the police sta-tion to report the accident.

Police took Cook to the Navy Dispensary where he was treated for a deep cut extending from cheekbone to jaw.

Carousel -- a Concept of Heaven

What's Heaven like? Many and varied would be the answers to that query, and "Carousel," Rodgers-Hammerstein Broadway musical hit, now brought to the screen by 20th Century-Fox in revolutionary new CinemaScope 55, is one answer. In practical, New England idea, "Carousel" tells story of Billy Bigelow (Gordon MacRae) who gains one-day return to earth from Heaven. Seen in the major roles are Shirley Jones, Gene Lockhart, Audrey Christie and Barbara Ruick. In earthly life, Billy ran a Maine carousel.

Carousel owner (Christie) is jealous of Julie (Jones) because of interest shown in Billy. Julie is worker in local mill.

Billy and Julie tryst at a park bench; mill owner reproaches Julie; officer says Billy tricks girls, takes money.

Billy and Julie, missing for several days, show up at local fishing wharf and announce that they have married.

Billy, coaxed into holdup while drinking, is surprised. When he tries getaway, he falls on his own knife, dies,

In one-day return to earth, Billy finds daughter, Louise (Susan Luckey), now 15, under cloud because of him. At high school graduation, a speaker points life moral and invisible Billy sees daughter's worried look leave.

It's New! Shelf of Many Uses

Newest answer to the ever present problem of where to put things is answered by Margaret Welch, a San Franciscan, who has invented this modern shelf for use in homes, offices, hospitals, motels, hotels and resorts. It is called Maggi-Shelf, measures 10x23 inches, is modern in design, light in weight, holds up to 50 pounds, and its easily installed with two evergrip hangers which hold on sheetrock, plaster or wood. It may be fitted easily into any room, on the backs of doors, or on the patio for gardening tools and equipment, or plants. The folding design and sleeve wrapper made it easy to display, store and carry.

Shuffleboard is an old favorite among games. It is easy to lay out a permanent court on the rumpus-room floor or porch. If such space is not available, the court may be painted on canvas to be rolled up and brought out as wanted. Pattern 408 gives dimensions and directions for making the court, disks, cues and score board. The pattern also gives directions for making the gadgets used in two other indoor games. If you are an indoor game fan, you may want to order the rumpus-room game packet containing five patterns each with directions for one big game and two small games. Price of Pattern 408 is 25 cents, the packet, $1. Send orders to: Pattern Dept., Southland Magazine, Independent, Press-Telegram, Bedford Hills,

Bank Reopenings Face Brief Delay

Long Beach's Lost Weekend

Half Million Review

Fric Navy Review
City Will Greet Old Ironsides
This Morning About 10 O'Clock

By Harry Karns

THIS IS ABOUT a city's lost

Lost, in the sense that things which were supposed to take place were forgotten.

Plans that were made did not come off.

Few headlines that seemed important on Friday were remembered on Monday. And if they were recalled, it was with the sense of irony felt when values are suddenly realigned by some powerful event.

The city was Long Beach, the year 1933.

And like all other cities of America, Long Beach watched with great interest the new President, Franklin D. Roosevelt. There was a bank holiday. (P. E. Hatch of the Long Beach Clearing House said local banks were ready to open "when the signal is given.") The banks and the people watched and waited and the big story was Congress and Roosevelt-mostly Roosevelt and what he would do about the depression . . .

IN LONG BEACH, FDR had to share the news space with the Navy. On Thursday, March 9, warships 130 strong—seven miles of them with the U.S.S. Pennsylvania in the vanguard-staged in front of the city the greatest naval parade ever seen in American waters. The climax of this naval pageant was to come on March 10.

Old Ironsides (the U.S. F. Constitution)-launched in 1794 and restored in 1931 through the donations of school childrenwas docked at San Pedro, Now the famous ship was to be towed to a berth at Long Beach, En route she would stop opposite the Pennsylvania, flagship of Adm. Richard H. Leigh. Then Adm, Leigh would repair to the Constitution and hoist to its main truck his four-star flag. It would be the first Admiral's flag flown from the mast of the historic frigate in 135 years!

Later, at dock in Long Beach, there would be an official greating by Mayor Asa E. Ficklingfollowed, in the coming days, by civic ceremonies and visits to the ships by the populace. For a Navy city it was an event of paramount interest and excitement, an event to take part in and read about later in the papers. Long Beach stirred with committees and anticipation. . . .

MEANWHILE, a civic battle raged. Scheduled for a decision at an election the following April was a proposed new city charter -and it had enemies. This night, March 10, they planned to speak out in a mass meeting at Municipal Auditorium, Long Beach, they argued, would face "certain confusion" in municipal affairs if

Is Uncle Sam Guilty in Counterfeit Case?

By BOB BECKMAN

SANTA ANA—Is the United States Treasury Department guilty of counterfeiting?

That seems a rather silly question, but high echelon Treasury officials are wrestling with a problem that might lead to such a verdict.

the Federal Government can-thing stands for. Isn't silver more expensive than copper?" The Treasury Department will have to answer that one.

It all started right here. N. H. Winterstein, a softspoken coin collector who lives at 1622 S. Broadway, was making his living helping care for a cigaret vending machine

He placed thousands of pennies daily into packs of cigar-

es to make change for quarters dropped into the machine.

The pennnies were obtained directly through Winterstein's bank from the San Francisco mint.

IN ONE OF THE BAGS of pennics Winterstein found a peculiar coin.

Looking at it closely, Wintersteln discovered he was the possessor of a silver penny bearing the San Francisco mint mark.

The slightly-built businessman and part-time coin collector advised the mint of his discovery. In no time at all, he was approached by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents. No doubt about it, they said, Winterstein had to turn the coin in. Winterstein refused. Later he was called to a meeting with FBI agents in Los Angeles. There he handed the coin "for inspection only," Winterstein said. It was never handed back to him.

"They did give me a receipt, though," Winsterstein said.

TESTS PROVED the penny was silver all right. It was forwarded to Washington where Winterstein believes it now is in the possession of the chief of the secret service counterfeit division.

Latest official word stein received was that the penny was to be destroyed.
Winterstein enlisted the help of Rep. James B. Utt, of California's 28th District. He advised Utt that the coin could be quite valuable—even more - valuable than erroneous issues of postage stamps that become prized collectors' items.

Utt wrote to high treasury officials and succeeded in obtaining an indefinite "stay of execution" for the coin. Winterstein and Utt both

An outstanding addition this week is the dramatization of the 1955 Newbery Award, de Jong's "Wheel on the School." Real stork calls add to the drama of the recording.

Of adult interest is "William Saroyan Talking Novels"; "Maugham Reading from His Works" and "Anthology of Negro Poets in the U.S.A. — 200 Years," read by Arna Bontemps.

Listeners of all ages will delight in the "Just So Stories" read by Boris Karloff.

The illustration accompanying this article shows mural of the boy king (second figure from left) presenting his ka or soul (center) to Osiris, god of death. The ka carries the ankh, a looped cross symbol of life. The figures at the right are the Goddess of the Sky and behind her, the Goddess Nut, mother of Osiris.

The long hidden tomb was found by the late explorers, Lord Carnavan and Howard Carter. It was packed with some of the world's greatest treasures of gems, precious metals and objects of art which are now on display at the Museum of Antiquities at Cairo, some 450 miles to the north.

KING TUT'S and the neighboring tombs in the parched Valley of the Kings have drawn an endless procession of visitors from every country. Nearby, on the west bank of the Nile, are Queen Hepshupet's palace, the Colossi of Mennon, Ramses temple, and other monuments man has created, among them the 400-acre Temple of Karnak and the Temple of Luxor, which ex-the new charter were adopted. Municipal tempers rose to the boiling point. For some persons the evening meeting promised to be the most important event of the day, . . .

Then there were, of course, the smaller functions—the club meetings planned for after dinner, the house parties, and the host of little events that are the most important ones of the moment for those concerned . . . But they didn't happen.

The stories that were, the plans that were, the weekend that was to be, vanished in a wink that Friday evening. The time was 5:55 p. m. The carth gave a shrug and toppled the best laid plans in one of the most disastrous earthquakes of the country's history.

WHETHER THE BANKS would open on Monday did not seem very important that weekend. Nor did many concern themselves with the question whether the admiral's flag had actually flown from the mast of the old frigate. The "certain confusion" of the proposed municipal charter diminished as a civic anxiety. The clubs forgot to meet. Through tacit agreement between hosts and guests the parties were unattended.

None of these were the news on Saturday, March 11. The news was:

COOKING

Casseroles Gain Seasonal Favor

By Mildred K. Flanary Press-Telegram Home Economics Editor

TURING LENT homemakers . 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard probably will find themselves planning more casseroles as main dishes than at any other season. This is perhaps due to the fact that cheese, eggs and canned fish or seafood seem to need bulkier foods like rice. macaroni or noodles to play supporting roles.

Souffles especially come into their own for they're an excellent source of protein, calcium, riboflavin and lactose. The "cook" takes great pride in turning out a souffle that is fluffy and beautiful to look at as well as delicious to eat - and our hostess today has just such a recipe.

Miss Rachel Morton, 1157 Freeland St., enjoys entertaining guests, and she can prepare a tasty dish with enthusiasm. Having lived and studied abroad for eight years, she brings to each occasion a continental atmosphere, rich in musical lore.

You'll like her recipe for Swiss cheese souffle, also, and it is featured elsewhere on this page to-in 1920. .3. The hard punching on the Republican side will have to be supplied by the vice presidential candidate, assisted by a host of G. O. P. senators, governors, congressmen and Washington members of the Eisenhower team.

4. To the Democratic candidate will go the advantage of activity, pointing up the contrast between a younger, more vigorous man and the slower, somewhat restricted incumbent in the White House.

7. And, for the first time and for the reason given above, the President's running mate will be a major, possibly the deciding issue in the campaign.

Ike Wise Not to Tell His Choice for Vice President at This Time

WASHINGTON .- President followed the Elsenhower right kind of political advice when he avoided a specific commitment on who the vicepresidential nominee should be on the Republican ticket.

The exact words the President used in answering a question at his press conference have not been stressed in many of the dispatches from Washington and radio comments, but they are meaningful. Here is what he said: "As a matter of fact, I wouldn't mention the vice presidency, in spite of my tre-mendous admiration for Mr. Nixon, for this reason: I believe it is traditional that the vice president is not nominated until after a President is, a presidential candidate is, nominated; so think that we will have to wait to see the Re-

LAWRENCE publican convention nominates, and then it will be proper to give an expression on that

The reporters pressed their questions, and Ike answered again: 'I will say nothing more about it. I have said that my admiration and my respect for Vice President Nixon is unbounded. He has been for me a loyal and dedicated associate, and a successful one. I am very fond of him, but I am going to say no more about it." No candidate in advance of a neminating convention has ever announced publicly the man he wanted as his running

The reasons are based on

Steel His Undoing?

First of all, anyone who is ter chance to observe Nixon himself aiming to win the presidential nomination doesn't venture to antagonize any faction which has a vice-presidential candidate in mind. Secondly, to pick a man for vice president before the convention votes on the top man means a fight that any sensible political leader will regard as an umnecessary battle. In politics, the trick is to avoid doing the unnecessary and the superfluous where votes in a national convention are at stake.

people realize that neither Sen. Sparkman of Alabama, who was chosen to be the vice - presidential nominee on the Democratic ticket with Stevenson, nor the then Sen. Nixon of California, who became the running mate of Mr. Eisenhower, were prominently mentioned for second place in advance of the conventions in

THE FIGHT now to prevent the renomination of Nixon as vice president could have ruinous effects inside the Republican party. For, while he wasn't a Tait man in the pre-convention fight of 1952; he is friendly to that wing of the Likewise, while he didn't exactly become a champion of Sen. McCarthy's cause. he did not attack him. Any abandonment of Nixon would be regarded, therefore, as a slap at both the Talt and Mc-Carthy supporters and also against those Republican organizations which, in the 1954 congressional campaign, benefitted so much from Nixon's active campaigning in more than a dozen western states. He also has built up quite a following in the so-called "Eisenhower wing" of the

at work than anybody else. He finds Nixon able and versatile and perhaps more familiar with Ike's policies than anybody else on the Eisenhower team. He has been in on all the important conferences on governmental affairs, national and international. The President, to be sure, has been leaning on Nixon for political guidance. If it isn't to be Nixon, then who? Several names are mentioned. Gov. Herter of Massachusetts is an able man. There's a controversy, however, over his eligibility, since; though of American parentage, he was born abroad. Doubtless the Supreme Court would ultimately rule that he is cligible, but it would make quite a rhubarb for the Democrats to play with, and there would be doubt raised among the voters for a long time as to who would succeed Ike in case he didn't stay on in the presidency. The case really couldn't be ruled on till it was actually presented to the Supreme Court. Would the voters "buy a lawsuit?"

Then there's George Humphrey, Secretary of the Treasury. He would be acceptable to business men on every side, and this also means the regular Republican organization men. But the Democrats would have a field day on the subject of Humphrey's former connections with the steel industry. They would also point to the fact that Humphrey is 65 years old now. * * * *

THE NAME of former Gov., Dewey has been mentioned, though he ran twice for President and was defeated. Inside the party the factional scars are still there. The original Taft men would not like it. Besides the New York state situation is full of old controversies that would be raked up. Mr. Dewey would make a good President, but it's a question whether he wouldn't be as vulnerable so far as satisfying the Democrats as is Nixon. For Dewcy, too, has said some harsh things about the Democrats - and there seems to be, at least among some writers still sympathetic at heart with the Truman cause, a feeling that the Republican vice-presidential nommee must be acceptable to the Democrats. Just why, nobody knows.

In the final analysis, Nixou, who is 43 years old—almost the same age that Theodore Roosevelt was when as vice president he succeeded McKinley-will probably be the man the Republican leaders will come back to and, if the truth were known, Ike really wants him. That's why, though the President didn't permit a formal endorsement, he went out of his way to say he had "tremendous admiration" for the vice president.

Still Playing in Luck, State's GOP Finds Prospects Brighter

Francisco this weekend to put the seal on revitalized party harmony, must be saying prayers of thankfulness for the good luck that has come to the party in this state again. In California, Mr. Eisenhower's midweek announcement meant more, from the stan dpoint of Republican accord, than it did anywhere anywhere clse the nation. For it was here that there was a real threat to the party solidarity that has given the GOP remarkable strength in a state where the registration edge. belongs clearly to the opposition party. Now the GOP, having tottered on the brink of a real intraparty struggle, can close ranks and make a solid effort to hold the line again against the biennial Democratic onslaught. In one way or another, California Republicans have kept out of critical intraparty fights over the years of Democratic

CALIFORNIA Republican ascendancy in voter registra-leaders, meeting in San tion here and in power in other tion here and in power in other states. This was the more remarkable because a number of strong, ambitious leaders arose in California Republicanism in that period. To be sure, there were minor flareups, but never any wide open, damaging clashes between these men and their loyal followers.

THIS YEAR, it looked as if the party could no longer stave off such trouble. Democratic leaders viewed with satisfaction the indications, which received heavy press attention over the nation, that Knight, Nixon and Knowland factions were about to put on the gloves and have at it. But Californian Republicanism was playing in luck again, and now a coalition slate of delegates to the national convention, pledged to President Eisenhower, is being formed under direction of the party leaders in session at San Francisco. At this writing, there is still a possibility of some disagreement over the matter of supporting Vice President Nixon for second place on the national ticket; but there's a good chance that the Repub-lican penchant for settling squabbles out of court will take care of another threatched difficulty.

IT IS FAR too early for solid predictions as to how the winds will blow in November, but certainly the prospects are brighter for keeping the state in the GOP column when the electoral votes are counted. President Eisenhower is obviously highly popular in Cali-fornia. He and Nixon carried the state handily in 1952. It appears at this time that the Republican ticket will have a good chance of doing it again. That doesn't mean that GOP victory can be obtained without a struggle. The Democratic organizations are showing more life than usual at this stage of the game. In this area, for one, they are certainly more active than Republican groups right now.

The Democrats first have that little matter to settle between Sen. Kelauver and Adlai Stevenson at the June primary. If they get over that one without too many wounds, they should give the GOP a warm contest.

With Ike at the head of the GOP ticket, the edge seems to lie with the Republicans. But any Republican who thinks it's all over already is stupid.

Congressmen, certain food manufacturers, and food and drug administrator George P. Larrick are trying to plug the loophole in the law by requiring government approval before chemicals can be added to food products. They point out that during the last 15 years, approximately 25,000 such chemicals have been screened by manufacturers, of which 24,-600 have been discarded as unsafe. Moreover, of the 400 now in use, it is estimated that 150 have never received adequate testing. Polyoxyetelene monostearate is just one example.

Tragically, it is just one lone Congressman, pattling on behalf of the chemical industry, who is keeping the loophole from being closed too tightly. He is Rep. Joseph P. O'Hara (R.-Minn.), author of a bill that ostensibly would close the Joophole, but which actually would leave the Food and Drug Administration still virtually powerless.

O'Hara's bill would force the government to prove its case in court every time the Food and Drug Administration pretested -a food chemical and found it dangerous. This would tie up the Food and Drug Administration in endless legal red tape.

J. M. Gillet of the Manufacturing Chemists Associations, Inc., is the chief source of the pressure on O'Hara. He has the backing of several repre-

Prisoner of the Occupation

, HE LEGIONS of Cinna, the hordes of Attila and the armies of a fellow named Eisenhower had lots of things in com-

trying place for a pretty fraulein named Erika Angermann of Dresden. To avoid rapine, she surrendered herself to the first conqueror, a Russian officer. Then came the Americans and they, in their way, weren't much hetter

But Erika must eat, James Mc-Govern relates in his new novel, "Fraulein" (Crown, $3.50), and she is able, too, to retain something of a moral purpose in life. From some very depressing circumstances she rises to become the wife of a very rich Ameri-

And when the time comes that she might return to her first love, a German officer of preoccupation days, Erika stavs. after all, with her husband.

As interesting as the story of Erika is the story of the occupation and its attendant hysteria. —G. C. F.

A SPIRITUAL UPLIFT for the devout, particularly those of Catholic faith, is "The Living Bread" (Farrar, Straus and Cudahy, $3), in which Thomas Merton - who is Father Louis of the Order of Cistercians of the Strict Observance - is concerned with the Eucharist as sacrifice and sacrament. Catholic doctrine is expounded on a foundation of Holy Scripture, the Holy Fathers. the Council, pontifical documents and the judgments of theologians. And it is easy to see by the reading that Father Merton is înspired, for his passages are filled with the joy of the Eucharistic life as the Christian life in all its perfections.

ANTHONY POWELL'S "The Acceptance World" (Farrar, Straus and Cudahy, $3.50) is of the time of F. Scott Fitzgerald. Mr. Powell's people move in somewhat the same wierd times and places -- the early depression and all that sort of thing, you know. Well knit, often pretty funny story about people who either accept, or don't the loaves and fishes life has to produce. Not much recommended for folks under 40.

MARGARET SHEDD'S novel "Run" (Doubleday, $3.50) is the story of a young boy's fear. Suspected of the horrible murder of a baby, he flees to strange hiding places in the town, finally holds the town at bay from a shack. His mother and father, long separated, are reunited at the scene but not for any happy ending.

SET IN A NORTHWEST sawmill town shortly before the time of the Civil War, "The Royal Anne Tree" by Patricia Campbell (Macmillan, $3.50) is primarily the story of gentle Louise Vane

Jack Craig, generally classed as students.

AT THE MURDER trial some Carma crew members identified Guy as the "man at the porthole"; others were not so sure.

Edward DeLarm, a Glendale aviator friend, swore that Guy was in the DeLarm home when Wanderwell was killed. This was corroborated by DeLarm's family.

Crew members testified that they did not know what was in the missing Spanish note. Mrs. Wanderwell, weeping on the stand, testified that she did not know, either.

A divorced wife of Wander-well was quoted in a press dispatch from Seattle as saying, "My former husband had an arrogant way of suddenly turning on his heel and walking away when he wanted to end a conversation. Perhaps he did it once too many times."

GUY WENT TO TRIAL Feb. 2, 1932. Two weeks later the jury of nine men and three women returned a "not guilty" verdict. Jurors said they took four ballots; the first ballot stood 10 to 2 for acquittal.

Deported after the trial, Guy fought with the Loyalists in Spain and the Chinese armies in the Orient. He served six months as a flying instructor at Regina, Saskatchewan, then joined the RAF Ferry Command. In the same service was Edward De-Larm, the aviator who had furnished his alibi in the murder trial.

Guy was credited with making more trips across the Atlantic with American-built bombers than any other pilot in the service.

IN 1940, GUY was co-pilot-on a plane which carried Canadian Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King across the Atlantic for a conference with Winston Churchill. Then, Oct. 15, 1941, he crashed in a Lockheed Hudson bomber being ferried to England.

In December 1933, Aloha Wanderwell married Walter Baker, a former Wyoming sheepman, in Gretna. La., and in 1936 they headed the Walter Wanderwell Educational Expedition to Indochina. In the early 1940s or so, they lived for a time in Long Beach but have since dropped out of sight, as have the Wanderwell daughters, who, if they are living, now are in their 30s.

Lord Montagu? He joined the French Foreign Legion. The last anyone here knew of him he was reported to be running a hamburger stand in Duckingham, England.

TALE OF TEDDY

pygmies and, such a situation being outside the scope of his experience, Mr. Kodiak prudently retreated to ponder the problem. Anyway, he turned and ambled off."

The next day, the entire party, including Linsley, set out with high-powered rifles to try and locate the animal which had tested the tree-climbing prowess of the museum men. Lincoln was convinced that this particular bear fitted his specifications as the long-wanted "attention-getter" he needed to complete his Kodiak bear display.

In a few hours they spotted the giant about three-quarters of a mile away. Approaching with extreme caution, Linsley drew a bead on the monster and dropped him with the first shot.

Then came the big job of getting the massive skull, bones and hide back to civilization. The bear was skinned and skull dissected and scraped out. The thick hide was so heavy that it had to be dragged - skin side out, to protect the fur.

TREMENDOUS TEDDY was lean, just out of hiberation, and his weight of 1,190 pounds falls far short of the present record of around 1,800 pounds for giant Kodiaks. His skull, though, does constitute a record for size, being 17 15/16 inches by 12 13/16 inches — the largest bear skull of which there is record. Teddy stands 8 feet, 8 inches tall on his hind legs and his reach is around 12 feet from ground to foreclaw tip when outstretched in vertical position.

The work of "reconstructing" Teddy in the museum taxidermy shop was a long, arduous and expensive task. It required more than a year to dry and tan the hide, prepare and dry the bones and skull. Another year was consumed in the work of building the armature, or simulated skeleton containing some of the animal's original bones, and in making the clay model and the fiberboard mannikin, upon which the bearskin is attached.

The cost of such a taxidermy project, for a private citizen, would be from $800 to $1,000, museum authorities estimate.

"Except for the exciting circumstances of our first meeting with Tremendous Teddy, I'm very glad to have made his acquaintance," Mel Lincoln asserts. "He's one of the finest examples of the vanishing giant Kodiak bears ever bagged and he attracts plenty of gasp-provoking attention. What's more, Teddy's a confirmed family man now and a real credit to the Los Angeles County Museum."

PET PARADE

Simian Lulu With the Hula

By Eleanor Avery Price

OVELY Hula Hands" and cate hula movement. all the other rhythmic songs of the Pacific "Paradise Isles" may be fine for girls who are learning to sway and to "speak" the hula with two slim hands. But what's a girl supposed to do who is learning to hula when she has five hands? That's right, five hands!

The girl, Penny, is a spider monkey, and in the case of a spider monkey the feet and tail also serve as hands. To tip five hands like gull's wings bent in flight while swaying gracefully to Polynesian music really takes a bit of doing!

SO. THOUGH SHE feels as though she were all hands (and a whale of a lot of elbows), Penny is learning to flat-foot two of her extremities. Her tail (and spider monkeys have the strongest tails in the monkey kingdom) just sort of follows along like a waving flower, the petals of which have been stripped off by an over-blustery Hawaiian tradewind.

Penny, age about one year, is the hip-swinging, poetically-fingered pet of Flora Wolfe, 200 E. Adams St.

When Flora received Penny as a gift, it was only natural that the little monkey, a born mimic, would try to imitate her owner when Flora practiced her hula routines. In Flora's mind a bright light dawned, flamed brightly, and since then she has been teaching Penny to hula in earn-

BEFORE VERY LONG, Flora hopes to include Penny in her occasional public performances. Although the hula-loving King Kalakaua of days gone by and all the legendary Polynesian gods and goddesses who gave their blessings to the island dance might do a bit of ghostly writhings of their own over the idea of a monkey doing the hula, Flora wears a rosy smile-lei at owning a spider monkey endowed with the poetry of the hula dance.

Penny has a very pleasant home life. Her sleeping cage, which is kept immaculately clean, is in the garage, and Penny has full run of this building during the day when Flora is working at the Lakewood Country Club. She has a gay old time with the garden tools and the assortment of odds and ends that usually clutter a garage, and she can lug even the heaviest things around with her strong tail.

BECAUSE SHE is inordinately fond of bathing (she gets a bath daily), and because she loves to swing on the shower rods in the house, Penny's swinging apparatus in the garage consist of a collection of shower rods.

Penny is happiest when Flora comes home and takes her into the house where she has the run of seven rooms to explore, TV to watch, and with a little luck, an unexpected snack. Penny's taste buds drool more over marshmallows than anything else, and so Flora employs these white morsels when she is training her pal to perform an intri-

For breakfast Penny eats a poached egg and a serving of pablum. At night her meal consists of vegetables, a cup of milk, and always a banana.

Penny is a friendly little creature and baby-talks to Flora with her dark tropical eyes held close to Flora's face as though begging to be understood. She has a merry laugh and a pathetic chattering cry when things go wrong.

THEY'RE CALLING Ted Williams the "Batting King Without

For the last two seasons Ted has led the American League in batting, but neither year won the batting title because he did not go to bat the required numof times-400.

In 1954 he missed by 14 with 386 official trips to the plate. Williams hit 345, drove in 89 runs and walloped 29 homers. However, the batting crown went to Cleveland's Bobby Avila, who went to bat 555 times and hit .341 while driving in 67 runs and hammering out 15 homers.

Last year, Williams missed hy 80, going to bat only 320 times when he reported late once again,

Meanwhile, Detroit's Al Kaline walked off with the batting crown despite hitting 16 points less than Williams.

The third time around may prove to be the charm for Ted. who hopes to get in a full season

THERE SEEMS TO BE a bit, of a controversy developing as to just how important Williams was to the Red Sox in their amazing comeback last season. Sam 'Mele, Ted's former teammate, says that "Boston's surge was due to Williams . . . all Williams. I don't mean just his hits, home runs and runs batted in They help, of course, but I refer chiefly to what the public never sees. And that is the way Williams is teaching all of those young players how to hit.

"They all listen when he speaks. He tells them how to do it and then they all go out and try to do it. The way he is coaching the newcomers is well worth the $100,000 salary the Red Sox pay him."

ON THE OTHER HAND. though, calcher Sammy White recently criticized Williams for interfering with the Red Sox pitchers, "which does more harm than good to the Boston mound White claims Williams fancies himself an expert on pitching strategy as well as hitting. "Ted started out as a pitcher and he pitched a few imings when he first came up to the majors.

The Bosox catcher admits that Williams is a great team player and that he always is looking for ways of helping the club, but belives the pitchers would operate much more effectively if he clubs are represented in would quit interfering.

CAMERA-ANGLE

A Switch to Stereo

By the Shutterbug

STEREO CAMERAS have brought a specialized field to photography, but the normal camera fan can easily adjust to stereo shooting by observing a few simple rules.

Look for foreground interest which will tie into the background. Instead of shooting broadside at your subjects, aim for a three-quarter angle so that there's something of interest extending from some point in front to the back.

However, beware of extremes. You can't shoot something two, three or four feet from the camers and let the scene stretch out to infinity.

WHEN THE closest object is, say, six feet away and the farthest object is, say, 25 feet away, the camera is generally focused at a point about one-third from the foreground, or in this example, at 12 feet. With the lens closed down a bit for more normal shooting, it would bring both foreground and background in focus.

Generally, there's no difference in figuring exposures for color films for stereo. Outdoors, follow the information and directions which come packed with the film or use a light meter. Remember the standard exposure for a sunny day is 1/50 second at f6.3 with daylight type Kodachrome (ASA 10). With the new faster color films (ASA 32), the standard is 1/50 at f11.

WHEN YOU SHOOT flash indoors, the stereo camera must be set at a speed of 1/25th of a second.

For good indoor color rendition, use Kodachrome Type F film with No. 5 or No. 25 clear flashbulbs. This combination needs no color correction filter and has a guide number of 95. That means that with a little simple arithmetic, you can figure out the correct lens opening for whatever distance you are shooting. Divide the distance into the guide number, 95, and that's what the lens is set at. For instance, if your subject is six feet away, divide 95 by 6 and the correct lens opening is f16.

HOW TO Use a Screen to Add Decorative, and Utility Values to Your Home

1. WITH A FOLDING screen between the two areas, privacy is added to a combination living and dining room. The silk fabric covering this screen harmonizes with the floral design of the quilted chintz sofa. You could cover a screen with patterned wallpaper for a similar effect.

2. HIDE A seldom-used door with a tall screen to match or contrast with your walls. The screen in this room, covered with eye-catching wailpaper, is high enough to cover the top of the door. Height of a screen is important to its good looks—line it up with some architectural feature.

3. BRING A CORNER to life with a colorful picture screen. A collection of prints was added to this three-panel screen for an interesting effect. Pictures, placed above table height, are protected with a coat of clear lacquer.

4. A DECORATIVE screen is used in this living room to direct traffic from front door (at right out of photograph) to the bedroom hall. It hides the bathroom door. also. Notice how the screen creates a background for the love seat.

Bob Kelley Says ...

I have a reputation of championing some rather strange personalities in sports—among them Aragon and Gussy Meran. Still another of "my boys," in a manner of speaking, is the Gray Orator of Malibu Hills, Harvey IKnox.

Harvey, I feel, is one of the most misunderstood men of our generation. You mention his name and the average sports fan sizzles: "Aw, that loud mouth. Why doesn't he shut up? All he's oing is hurting his kid!"

But has he hurt Ronnie? Hasn't he made the youngster the nost talked-about football player in collegiate ranks? Harvey has set Ronnie up for either a fat pro contract, or a pretty good shot at hitting the big-time in the movies.

Have you ever heard Ronnie complain about his stepfather? haven't. Ronnie and Harvey are as inseparable and loyal to each other as a couple of buddies in an Okinawa fox hole.

ONE NIGHT LAST FALL, THE MONDAY AFTER UCLA was beaten by Maryland, Harvey came on my radio program. In his usual outspoken style, he blamed the loss on the fact that Henry Sanders didn't let his boy play enough.

BOB KELLEY

At the windup, I thanked him him for dropping by. And in a moment of confusion, Harvey came back with a reply they're still chuckling about in radio circles. "Well," he said. "It was my pleasure, Thank you, SAM."

After the program, we sat in my office for maybe an hour and a half. I wanted to learn the real Harvey Knox story, how he happened to become Ronnie's stepfather, and so "During World War II," the

SHIPPING CUT flowers from this area has become a little "big business." Southern California is the country's most important shipping center for "birds." Dahlias for All Gardens

By John Ronson

AHLIAS, natives of Mexico and Guatemala, thrive throughout the Southland. There is, as a matter of fact, a greater variety of dahlias in Southern California than in this plant's native habitat.

There are just about 10 different types of wild dahlia. Yet bulb catalogs frequently list hundreds of separate varieties. There are close to 2000 named varieties, with new ones being introduced each year. Some of the old-time favorites, however, still rank among the best.

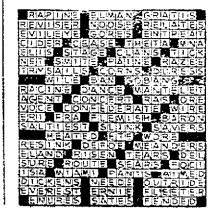

Raising dahlias should do a lot for your gardening ego. There are just a few rules to follow and prize-winning specimens will make you very happy. Recommended is a well drained loamy soil. Héavy ground having high water-retentive qualities may prove difficult. The tubers may rot even before growth gets under way.

DAHLIAS CANNOT tolerate frosts or excessively cold weather; so delay planting until the weather and soil warm up thoroughly. During the growing season, especially during the summer, dahlias want liberal quantities of moisture. When the buds appear, additional applications should be made.

The average well-balanced food should suffice for dahlias but be careful about excessive nitrogen content. Dahlias do not react favorably to foods with a great deal of nitrogen, which may lead to an excess of leaf and stem growth, sacrificing flower pro-

ing. The eye of the tuber should be close to the stake but not quite touching it. Gradually fill in the planting hole as the shoot develops.

THE MAIN DAHLIA classes are: Single dahlias with one row of petals, usually from eight to 10 in number; cactus dahlias with slender, gracefully arched petals; show dahlias, compactly built, double and globe-shaped.

The decorative dahlia is midway between the cactus and show types, having broad, flat petals; the peony dahlia has an open center with not more than three rows of ray florets. Pompons are small, usually less than two inches across; the collarette is single except for a collar of small petals around the center.

Tips on Gardening

AST MONTH I talked about aphii but, of course, they aren't the only garden enemies, even if they are the most noticeable. Thrips are invading your glads and roses and many other flowers; mildew, black spot and rust may be invisible but are nevertheless present on your roses, delphiniums, etc. And on many of your vegetables.

For that reason, I like to recommend a two-purpose spray; One that destroys destructive insects and checks fungus dissoil area.

eases at the same time. It isn't a good idea to have to spray too often. The only good a spray material can do to the plant is to relieve it of its enemies. The plant shouldn't have to take the shock of being sprayed too often. So use a spray that covers as many needs as possible and use it thoroughly, covering the entire plant and even the surrounding For beautiful roses, flower gardens week . . . Camellias are often recognized as an introduction to spring, although many varieties flower during late winter. At any rate, no California garden should be without a few of these gorgeous ornamentals. Visit your nurseryman now and examine the various types.

Delphinium clumps should be

Brilliant Birds

EXPERTS DIFFER as to the best location for the bird of paradise. Some claim full sun is essential while others recommend partial shade. The best compromise, of course, is to plant in full sun along the coastal regions and in partial shade inland. In the hot, interior regions, the "birds" should be protected from excessive heat by planting in filtered sunlight.

Inadequate drainage or lack of moisture may cause the plants to die. A rich seil plus fairly liberal quantities of moisture are essential. During the winter season you should gradually reduce the amount of water; this is especially true for plants grown GARDENING TIPS for the planted well towards the rear of your flower border. These plants have a very aspiring habit of growth, shooting up to a rather impressive height. If planted near the front of the border they will hide from view the smaller growing varieties.

> If sufficient room is available, try a few berry plants. They may be trellised across your backyard fence. Be sure to plant a few bushes of Boysenberry: This is a real treat in eating.

Nielsen said he would just as soon climb out on a window ledge 200 feet above the floor as walk across Pine Ave.

"IT'S A LOT SAFER up there all by yourself," he claims.

"Now," he says, "I'd tackle a New York skyscraper without even counting the floors."

Biggest hazard to the window washer is loose hooks, special metal catches installed outside of most tall buildings. The washers slip their safety belts into one end of the hooks, swing out on the window ledge and fasten the other end of their

THOMAS NIELSEN probably has been blamed for "making it rain" more than any other man in Long Beach.

Nielsen, 57, is a window wash-

"Every place I go, peering into some 11th story window, or balancing on a ledge 50 feet above the ground, someone tells me that it's bound to rain because I just washed the window panes," Nielsen lamented.

A window washer for 37 years,

But Nielsen admits that he wasn't a tall-building man from the beginning. He started on the second floor of a downtown building in 1925, and worked himself to the top, floor by floor.

"We found that each man who

"Now, all of these hooks are riveted into place," he said.

One down town department store presents a special problem, he said. The windows are too large for a single belt and windows are separated by large pillars. The washer must teeter on a ledge, throw one end of his belt to a partner at another window and swing around the ecment pillar to the window.

"MY WIFE used to object to my job," Neilsen said. "But that was when we were first married. Now, she just considers it a job — as I do."

Neilsen, who works for the Pacific Window Cleaning Co., said the Wilton Sky Room is the highest spot in town where he renders his services. It is about 15 stories high on the ocean side.

The room equipped with permanently closed windows offers a few added thrills, Neilsen said. It's a two-man job.

"YOUR PARTNER goes on top of the building and fastens a long rope in a hook on the roof. Then with one end tied around your middle like a mountain climber, you swing from window to window, just barely touching your toes on the ledge as you go. '

The partner then lowers the window washer's equipment - a bucket of water, two squeegees, a sponge, a chamois and a brush.

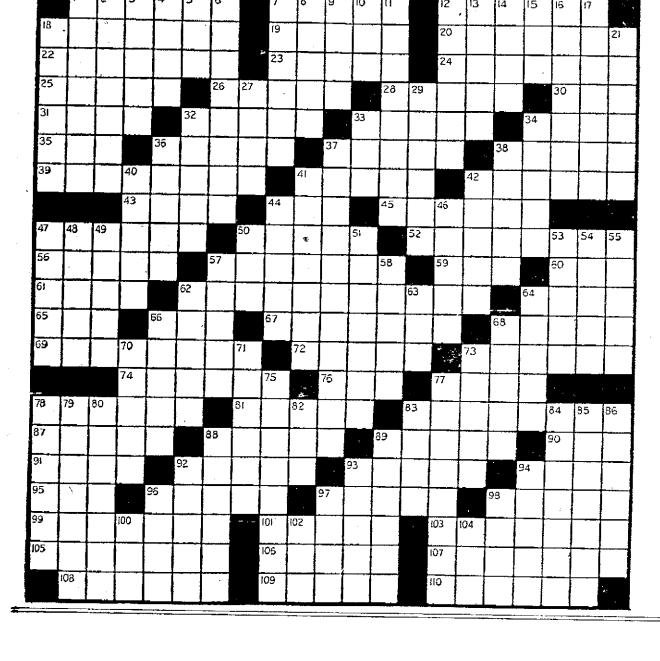

"People always ask me how I can stand working up in the air like that," Neilsen said. "It's just like anything else. I got used to it."

"AND IT'S nice work," Neilsen said. "You meet all kinds of people while cleaning their windows. A pilot at the Wilton even invited me to take an airplane ride with him, but I turned him down.

"I don't think I'd like it 'way up in the air like that," Neilsen commented.

"Ill just stay here on the ground."

Caricature by Dick Arnold VICKY DYER Murmurs of Appreciation

RNIE GLASER'S Chandelier Restaurant — certainly one of Long Beach's most beautiful showplaces — presents two items of decor which never fail to bring murmurs of appreciation from the guests.

These two items are hostesses Vicky Dyer, a lovely blonde, and Kathy Burns, a lovely brunette. Dressed in chic French maid costumes, they are Paris personified as they escort the patrons to their tables. Glaser, the owner of this fashionable Parisian restaurant at 4205 Atlantic Ave., is no slouch either in the costume department.

Glaser, a man with a lively imagination, constantly thinks up new, spectacular dishes for the amazement and pleasure of his patrons. His flaming delicacies are always exotic. Recently he added another original to his menu - a lobster and steak gourmet's dinner for $3.75. This consists of half a sweet Australian lobster tail with melted butter and half a Chandelier steak with mushroom sauce. This specialty is served with a large salad, baked potato with cheese sauce and chives, assorted continental breads and choice of bevcrage.

FOR LENT, the Chandelier features scrumptious Sea Food Mardi Gras, an elaborate mixture of ocean delicacies. It's $2.75, complete. For budget-minded guests the Chandelier offers a wonderfully impressive and delicious planked, chopped sirloin dinner for $2.25.

In the entertainment department, the Chandelier is par excellence. Currently featured are the splendid voice of Gordon Wheatley, accompanied by accordionist-pianist Vina Mac Hermer: French singer Mademoirelle Lili and strolling violinist Sid

Exchange to Limit Members

The Builders' Exchange Long Beach, Inc., a non-profit corporation here since 1923, took action at its board of directors meeting last week limiting the amount of members it will allow on its roles to 300.

"This action was taken to be consistent in our program of fostering the best contractors material dealers." nounced general contractor W. Wilson, chairman of the membership committee of the association.

"In the years following World War II, the great volume of construction, along with the thousands who have entered the construction field, has made it very difficult for the Exchange to keep pace with the industry in its endeavor to keep the public informed regarding the reliability of builders and products," he

"The preamble to our bylaws states that membership in the Builders' Exchange is a reasonable assurance, to the public, of the skill, honesty, responsibility and reliability of the member," said Wilson, "When a builder or material dealer advertises that he is a member of the Exchange we want to be able endorse him completely. Therefore we felt that a limited membership will make it better for our office to service the

Tempus fugit, and in no way is this so noticeable as when one sees a child of a few years ago now in full-blown adulthood and playing adult roles like a veteran: A case in point is the 'Front Row Center" show on (2) at 1 p.m. starring Margaret

O'Brien and Dean Stockwell. When both were moppets they nade a picture called "Secret Garden" for MGM and now here they are as a couple of playing fully matured roles in a murder mystery for TV. This is Stockwell's first TV drama appearance but Miss O'Brien has appeared on "Climax!" and some films.

The story tells of the young couple, parked by the lake in the moonlight, who see a man they know enter a cabin, hear a shot and, the next day, read that murder has been committed. They remain silent and a young transient is picked up, charged with the crime and very nearly loses his life.

Costumed Revelers to Unmask March 17

By JEAN B. MOORE In the case of the Long Beach Art Association, rolling out the red carpet is no figure of speech. It becomes an actuality at 9 p. m. on March 17. That night a width of ruby carpeting, like the slim lick of a flame, will spread itself from curb to the door of the Lafayette Hotel.

On it will walk the soft soles of moccasins and elves' slippers; sandals whispering of the Orient; heels of the flamenco dancer and the cowboy; spike heels of the flapper and rundown heels of the hobo. Weather and nerve permitting. there may even be the imprint of a bare pair of feet silently stealing up its length to the Cavalier Room where the annual Beaux Arts Ball will take place on the night of St. Patrick's Day.

The entrance of each costumed and masked revelor will be ceremoniously announced by, Phil Hattery, master of pomp and ceremonies. Then, to record the occasion for posterity, gaily costumed guests will pose momentarily before a polaroid camera for a portrait memento of the 1956 edition of the ball.

An hour after the party begins, trumpets will sound the grand march in which participants will vie for prizes in oils and watercolors. Consolation for those not winning a costume prize is the possibility of going home with a door award.

The exacting duty of judging the costumes for authenticity, beauty, originality, humor and uniqueness falls to Wilma Hastings, fashion authority and lecturer; Mrs. James G. Root, advertising artist, and Larry Johns, director of Community Playhouse. Dancing to Roger Bacon's orchestra will be climaxed at 1 a. m. with a three-course Here's a recipe for a king-sized dessert called, "Society Delight." This will serve 5,000 nicely. Take 40 models and stir them gently through 102 delectable spring styles. Serve while hyacinths and daffodils are in bloom. Pay monetary compliments to Red Cross, "chef" in charge of concocting this confection.

That may be a zany way of saying that when the Long Beach Retailers and the Red Cross get together to do their annual benefit fashion show the hundreds who view it are tasting of one of every year's most tremendous style affairs.

Glimpsed here and there in the well-filled auditorium were Lorraine and Ed Penning, Doris Olson, Jim Wood, Vervyl and Howell Honeywell, Sally and Red Nesmith, Ruth and Harrison Moore, Helen and Herb Fielding, Hank and Vi DeLacy, Marge Sawyer, "Bud" Young, Marnette Peek, Juanita Stubb, Marge Sawyer, "Bud" roung, Marnette Peek, Juanua Stuod, Carolyn and Sted Gould, Ina and Willie Harris, Kathleen and Bruce Mason, La Vere and Lloyd Whaley. Lust Tuesday if you tried to phone Jane Rhorer, Odetta Fisher, Waula Pearson or Mary Ann Summer and couldn't reach them, or if you stopped by Lee Ellis', Louise Voigt's or Ruth Todd's and no one was home or, if you saw Pat Gilkey, Naomi Van Leigh, Luba Kadvany, Juanita Godwin or Jennie Murphy leaving their homes dressed to perfection and wandered what they were up to—here's the reason. They were among other Long Beachites who attended the L. A. County Medical Auxiliary Don Loper fashion show at the Beverly Hilton. Program chairman for the swish affair was none other than Odetta, who for her microphone chores were a stunning black dress with the most fetchingly placed rose you can imagine!

The timing was perfect and the surprise complete when Frances Cowley gave her unsuspecting husband, Len, a birthday dinner party the other night in their home, 5401 El Cedral. Crazy gifts from the 18 guests included a ceramic trout, permanent replacement for all the ones that get away!

There are several men in Long Beach, including "Bix" Bixby, Duncan McIntosh, George Hart and Sid Exley, who are more interested in weather conditions in Finland right now than here. They are Alamitos Bay Yacht Clubbers who can probably quote last night's temperatures in Helsinki. Why? Easy. They all have Pacific 32's on order from boatmakers in Finland, now frozen in tight during one of the country's severest winters. This brand new class of sailboat is sort of an ocean going sloop with auxiliary motor — or maybe it's an auxiliary motor with sloopy kind of sails. Anyhow they want to sail them and they can't get the ships over here until Finland thaws out! But when they do, look out! They'll be demons on Reminiscent of the words of Thomas Hood was the feeling reflected in the faces of Woman's City Club members on Saturday as they watched ground being broken for their new clubhouse, culminating months and even years of study, planning and fund raising.

Peace and rost at length have come, All the day's long toil is past, And each heart is whispering, "home, Home at last."

And home at last for members of City Club will be 1309 E. Third St., where the groundbreaking ceremonies took place. Turning the first shovel of earth in symbolic start of construction were Mrs. Ruth C. Runyan, current club president, and Mrs. L. H. Jarnagin, junior past president who has headed the building committee during the past heetic months leading up to the realization of the clubhouse dream.

Expressing good wishes on behalf of the city was Mayor George M. Vermillion. Mrs. James C. Anderson, president in 1935-36, gave a resume of the City Club's history. Also intro-

What Does Familiarity Breed? Party to Honor

By ILKA CHASE

I dearly love my native land and have been inhabiting it for a good many years but there is one widely touted aspect of American life today that has me baffled and that is democracy. Everyone speaks highly of it but in practice it seems quite confusing.

dictionary de-Webster's scribes what the democratic form of government is and goes on to say that a democrat "one who believes in or practices social equality." He can also be "a Fight uncovered wagon with two or more seats." This latter definition charms meland I wonder what republican could be that sounds as jaunty? A surrey with the fringe on top, maybe.

I guess where my interpretation differs from the dictionary's is in the social equality business. I agree with Abraham Lincoln that every human being is equal before the law but surely social equality has got to be based on ability and mutual interests.

We speak of social graces and we mean pleasant manners, courtesy, thoughtfulness of others; in a word a civilized mode of life but social equality as now practiced has very little to do with making life agrecable.

Excepting the affectionate telephone operators who call you Honey without seeing you and the salesladies who call you Dear, the whole idea today is to be rude as quickly as possible so that those we meet will understand that we are just as good if not better than they. Let's get familiar right off the bat, kids, otherwise people might consider us a step below them on the social scale. Yet simply calling people by their first names or soldiering on the job to show you are above the work you are engaged to perform-usually scarcely equality. On the contrary it would seem to indicate clearly that one will never be equal to anything better if one is not equal to the job at hand.

And as for that first name mania! I am told it indicates a friendly democratic spirit but I can feel just as friendly toward Miss Smith or Mr. Carmichael the first time I meet them as I can toward Gin or Butch, Indeed if I know they are Virginia Smith and Robert (Butch) Carmichael the chances are I will feel more friendly since they are more likely to seem real people whose names and interests I can remember rather than rootless figments drifting through the cocktails.

Why the use of surnames should make people feel inferior or stiff I don't know. Like a good many million Americans I too frequently refer to the President as "Ike" but if I ever met him you can bet your boots I'd call him Mr. President and I trust the millions would too. When I am with distinguished or elderly people, unless I have known them a very long time, I call them Mr. or Mrs. So and So and it does not humiliate me in the least.

And speaking of forms of address—if I may touch on an archaic and in general purely academic subject I should like to mention domestic heip.

In England cooks are usually called Mrs. by their employ-at astronomical wages -- is ers: Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Beecham and in turn they call their employers Sir and Madam and everyone, including themselves, knows quite well they are one of the most independent and respected, groups or classes

As far as American employers are concerned I don't doubt that those who need or can afford domestic help would happily address a cook as Your Grace if it would raise the souffle or weld her to the kitchen stove. Alas the opportunity rarely presents itself.

Probably the silver lining is that although the manners may not be meticulous occasionally the spirit is jovial. Like the time when in paying a woman who had come in to clean and cook dinner I said. 'Here you are, Mrs. Holmes. The money's the good part, isn't it?" She gave me a hearty clap on the back, "You said it, kiddo."

And I remember the episode John Crosby wrote about when he was returning from Europe on an American ship and a steward, passing a tray of hor d'oeuvres with the cocktails, inquired, genially of a group of passengers, "You guys want to

Case O-390: Dr. G. George Fox, aged about 65, is the brilliant rabbi emeritus of Chicago's South Shore Hebrew Temple. He is also a talented orator and a mainstay of our South Shore YMCA of which we are both board members.

When I am out of the city on lecture trips that keep me away over Sunday, Dr. Fox often pinch hits for me before my Bible class at the St. John's Church.

Incidentally, instead of easing up regarding my Bible teaching in my later years, I find myself becoming even more heavily engaged, And I am almost always on the job, if I am in Chicago. Only once in 20 years have I missed teaching my Bible classes due to illness.

But occasionally I am away from Chicago, so good friends like Dr. Fox then take my place and do a better job than I can boast of. Dr. Fox has a keen sense of humor so he judiciously mixes Bible inter-pretation with clever sallies.

"I'm the only Methodist rabbi in captivity," he laughingly informs the audience, referring to the fact that he obtained his Ph. D. degree at Illinois Wesleyan College.

FOR many years Dr. Fox graciously opened his large church auditorium to all civic and religious bodies who desired spacious central meeting places.

For we had no other adequate auditorium in our section of Chicago, Dr. Fox also was the prime organizer of the Ministerial Association of our area, which is composed of clergymen of all denomina-

Dr. Fox served as president thereof when it first was launched under his enterprising leadership and has been the main sparkplug ever since. He has proved not only a great moral asset to our part of Chicago, but has written several books and has lectured widely all over the U.S.

Originally hailing from Texas, he combines the outlook of both the North and the South, and serves as an ideal man to expound Old Testament Bible lessons.

In recent years, since his re-tirement as the active head of his Hebrew Temple, he has functioned as a marriage counsellor, for which he is admirably qualified. In fact, I recommend this role to all retired clergymen, for I find that the pastor is generally in bet-ter rapport with married folks than is the average physician or attorney.

SINCE marriage is a spiritual union and not a mere civil contract, I find that ministers usually have more of the artistic touch when probing into causes for marital feuding.

Our American clergy are also very alert to all modern psychological and psychiatric conditions. Over 1,500 clergymen write to me every year via this clinical psychology column. And I have personally

Our Children

Encourage Youth's Idealistic Wishes

By ANGELO PATRI

Young people about to be graduated from secondary schools and those approaching their senior year are likely to be thinking, dreaming, planning what they will do with their lives, what kind of work they will do, how they will live and where.

Often their dreams outrun their plans and for a time this must be accepted by teachers and parents. A dream, a deep wish, can become an actuality if it is granted time to season in its creator's mind, time to take form there. Then it becomes a plan for action and the teachers and parents can be of real help.

At times, older and more experienced people lose patience with the dreams and hopes of youth and squeich them with "Why don't you come down to earth? How do you expect to do any such thing? Where did you get the idea that you know more than anybody else, anyway?"

The youth is likely to know more about his secret hope for his future than anyone else. It is stirring within him and, while he has no words to detail the idea, indeed it is so formless as yet that no words would help, he feels power. Given time, allowed to experiment with his idea, given op-portunities to meet and talk with people who are successful in the field he visions for himself, his power will rise and become strong in purpose.

Oh. I don't know. Here he is, a fine boy, and his heart set on being a doctor. Not just a doctor, mind you, nothing so pedestrian as that. He's going to outdo that man in Africa, that famous doctor. More. He's going to discover a great new means of curing what now is incurable. It's all right. It's fine. But I hate like sin to see him start out with his eye on the moon. I hate to think of his disappointment, his awful disillusionment."

Many a father and mother have thought just that and suffered for their idealistic children. They need not. True. nobody ever yet has reached the height he marked as his, but oh, the number who climbed high because they did set it. That same doctor in Africa, Dr. Schweitzer, for example. This firm fact is on the side of the idealistic youth and maiden. The deep wish, set clearly in mind, seen as a finished job, becomes a hope and plan, without the firm faith that upholds them, there will be little growth toward the world's progress. There will be those who will maintain the progress made, but the man with the flag will be lacking and the world the loser.

So we would encourage the idealistic dream, the rainbowed hope, and help it come to actuality.

Long Beach Alumnae Chapter of Delta Zeta will honor newly elected officers of the active chapter at Long Beach State College this afternoon at a tea in the entertainment room of the Bank of Belmont Shore, with Mrs. F. J. Colton, president of the alumnae group, in charge.

Days of Forty-Niners

The "mystery girl" will appear next Wednesday in the Long Beach State College Forty-Niner for the first time.

The college newspaper taking advantage of a poll of typical college "sweethearts" has picked a girl from the student body, who has the measurements, the hobbles, and the likes and dislikes of the average campus queen.

The girl will appear in every issue, only the poor kid, her face will be blotted out.

The trick is for the student body to find the unknown campus "queen." Each week, additional bints will be given until her identity is finally established. As of now, only three people know the identity of the girl. The editor of the paper, Elson Irwin; Placer Miner, and the girl. This should be a good test of the power of a woman to keep Conventions, the blight of a newspaperman's life, were a blessing Friday and Saturday instead of a blight.

Long Beach State College hosted the California Inter-colegiate Press Assn. for two days. A full slate of contests, conferences, banquets, and speeches, kept the neophyte journalists and budding Joseph Pulitzers on the run. Ursula Delworth of State College and her committees did a terrific job of organizing the whole convention and making it the success it was.

Some like it, and some don't. If you're inclined towards the pony tail type of music instead of the crew cut, there is a program at Long Beach State College which will prove interesting.

Long Beach State College is scheduled for today, Mary Ann Haney, outgoing president, will install as new officers: president, Valjean Warden; first vice president, Joan Johnson; second vice president, Connie Garr; recording secretary, Dana Baurke; treasurer, Margie Harmon, and historian, Mickey Carter.

A tea followed the installation of new officers, which was held in the clubroom of the Bank of Belmont Shore. Guests were the parents of members, alumnae of Delta Zeta, actives and pledges.

St. Patrick's Day, the day of the wearing of the green, will be celebrated another way by the Zeta Tau Alpha at Long Beach State College. A cake sale has been scheduled by the sharp colleens who stand to gather a few pennies by catering to the collective sweet tooths of the State College males.

Last week's column incorrectely reported the dates of the One-actors at Long Beach State College. The correct dates for the three plays are: March 15, 16 and 17.

And these dates are not too far away, at least not far enough for the stage crews who have to get the Little Theatre ready for the student-directed productions.

Drew's early childhood was spent on the Canadian border side of Montana, and he recalls with nostalgia the bountiful hunting and fishing in those parts. He came to Long Beach in 1922, however, and attended Long Beach schools from the sixth grade up. He left his marks in the annals of Temple Grammar School, Poly and Wilson High, and City College. He took his degree at Pharmacy College in Los Angeles. At City College he added volume as well as harmony to the men's gice club.

A born wit, Drew's avocations all add up to very interesting procedure -- both to himself and to others. A shopsmith of note, the shelves in his store are among his own handiworks. His present drugstore, by the way, was the first one in the Lakewood area, being established 10 years ago. His customer potential then was 15,000 as against 100,000 today. His musical ability has been enhanced by a cord organ which he recently had installed in his home and which he enjoys for relaxation. Perhaps it takes the place of his former golfing activities. His good friends are not just sure why he's given up the game-but it's surmised that he must have missed a shot on an "off" day. He also holds the dubious record of the city's champion cribbage player.

A member of the local, and national Pharmaceutical Assn., he prexied the Long Beach branch for two years. He belongs to the Lakewood Chamber of Commerce and their Shrine Club, and is a member of the Palos Verdes Lodge No. 389, and of the El Bekal Shrine. other line of play would be preferable.

West's opening lead located the king and queen of spades. It was therefore clear that East had raised to two spades with no high spades or hearts. and with at best a queen in clubs. What could justify the raise except possession of both high diamonds?

A far better line of play was available. After taking the first trick with the ace of spades, South should cash both top clubs. He then gets to dummy with the nine of hearts to ruff a club, gets back to dummy with the ten of hearts to ruff a club with the ace of trumps, and gets to dummy with the queen of hearts to eash dummy's last club. Thus ten tricks are assured.

Molly Mayfield

Not So Merry Marriage Mixup

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

When you read this, I hope you can follow just what we six are up against. There is my husband, his ex-wife and her husband and his ex-wife and her husband-and seven children. The kids are being shuffled around like a deck of playing cards and everyone is unhappy, including me.

When I make arrangements to have a night off with my husband, and my mother is willing to take care of our twoyear-old, he wants his three kids here. When we have his kids here, his ex-wife plans a night out with her husband and he already has planned on haying his three with them. This is fine with wife number three because there are no kids, only one on the way.

My husband is unfair, I think, because every free minute he has he wants his kids here. I work and have one day off and I've got to get away from the house and people. This makes him mad and he says I don't want his kids. His ex-wife feels the same way I do, only she can't see my angle. Wife number three just sits back and gloats.

I'm only interested in my husband and me. I don't care about number one, two and

I like his kids and treat them good and he knows it. But they're not mine and I need to get out and away from even my own. Molly, can you help me? If not I will end up buggie or in another divorce court. Our life was planned before we married, but now all he thinks about are his kids and his exwife's feelings, not mine.

They don't ask me if anything is all right. They just tell me what is what and I'm not going to put up with it much longer.-MIXED-UP.

DEAR MINED-UP:

I certainly can't say I blame you. Heavens! What a mixedup situation with ex-wives and ex-husbands and seven children going round and round. I wonder that you even know which husband and child is

But what to do about it? First, I think I'd make things very clear with your husband that he can have his kids over any night but the one night a week you two go out. Surely, that is only fair and I think if you point this out to him in firm enough words—and actions—he will see things your Secondly, I think I would come to some kind of under-standing with wife number one about bringing the three children--or is it six? I couldn't quite figure it outover on your night out and also about her "friendliness" with your husband.

you, and you really do want to save your marriage, I'd hit every member of the triange (or is it two triangles?) until you found one that could straighten this out.

Maybe a get-together of all six persons could be arranged to thresh it out until rules were set up, or agreements made, suitable to all, Maybe a regular baby sitting plan could be worked out that would leave all of you with a night

You certainly have my sympathy, MINED-UP, and I hope you can find an answer to this mixed-up situation of yours .--

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD: I am 23 years old and have a problem for you to straighten out for me.

I have been going with Joe for some time now and am very much in love with him, as he claims to be with me. But how can a man love a girl and not be loveable?

He pays attention to me but never kisses me unless I go in the house. Sometimes we can be together eight hours and he will kiss me only four times. I really wonder if the man is human.

He says that every guy is different with love. He pays attention to me mentally but not physically. Do you think this

Capt. A. D. Borden Garrison No. 139 Auxiliary, Army and Navy Union, U. S. A., will launch a membership drive in March, announces Mrs. Nanette L. Elliot, membership chairman.

Every girl wants affection and I'm not different. But my fellow never wants to park. I think we'll break up if I don't get some good advice.— DAZED.

DEAR DAZED:

I don't think you're abnormal in your desire for affection and maybe your guy isn't either, but he sounds mighty strange to me.

Of course, he is probably just shy about making love. Maybe he doesn't know if he is making a fool of himself or really being romantic. And so he is not only hesitant but airaid.

Why not have a heart to heart talk with him about it? Tell him just what you have told me and see what he says. If he is shy, you can help him by being not too aggressive but enough so that he will take more courage. All he needs is a little experience and a little

You may find, though, that he is really a normally cold person. In that case, the two of you may never be meant for each other. There are a lot of persons who just don't like to make love, but they love people deeply. If you are a very affectionate person, this kind of man would not be for you. So the answer is in your hands. Frankly, you're just go-ing to have to decide what type he is and either try to change him or be happy with him.—

by LAURIN HYDE GENERAL DIRECTOR, NATIONAL TRAVELERS AID ASSOCIATION

The striking photograph above, of a nun greeting the brother she hasn't met since infancy, is one of the most heart-warming I have seen.

We of Travelers Aid, with offices at rail, bus and air terminals from coast to coast, are used to every kind of embrace — from the anguished clasp of a father whose son is going overseas to the noisy, joyous send-off of a honeymooning couple.

You'd think that by now we'd take human emotion for granted. But there is one embrace that never fails to move us — the kiss of reunion. A war prisoner returning to the wife who stubbornly refused to believe he was dead, a parent and child who never thought to see each other again, still bring a lump to my throat as I watch.

Nor is the lump due only to their unashamed emotions. It is also that we of Travelers Aid, thanks to the generosity of our contributors, can be the instrument of such reunions. The nun and her long-parted brother seem a symbol of our endeavors.

Double Your Money Back Unless it Gives You More Comfort, More Security Than You Ever Had Before

Yes, the people who make Polident, the world's largest selling denture cleanser, are standing right behind their new adhesive cream, Poli-Grip, with an ironclad guarantee. You get double your money back, if Poli-Grip doesn't hold your plates tighter, longer than anything you've ever tried.

And that's not all. See if you don't find that Poli-Grip does all these wonderful things for you, too:

- 1. . . . forms a cushion between your plate and gums to eliminate the friction that makes gums sore and raw.
- 2. ... holds shallow lowers, despite lack of suction.
- . , seals the edges of plates so food particles can't get underneath to cause irritation.
- 4. . . . enables you to eat hard-

- , gives you full confidence to laugh, talk, sing without fear of embarrassment due to slipping plates.

ON THE JOB after heart attack, Ike, with Mamje, waves greeting. He's cut down public appearances.

IKE'S DAY: It's different now

WASHINGTON, D.C.

When the first cheering reports came from the doctors that President Eisenhower was on the mend after his heart attack, his staff - and most Americans - had to ponder a painful question. Could lke carry the potentially killing burden of the Presidency for the rest of his term?

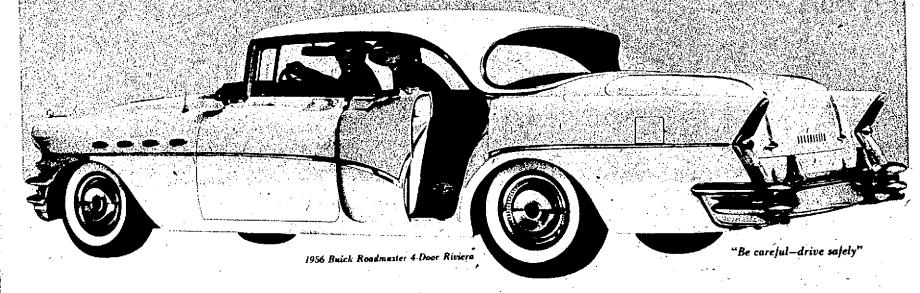

To date he's proved he can, but, obeying orders to avoid fatigue, Ike has made a lot of changes in White House routine. Some are so sensible they'll probably become standard procedure for future Presidents.

Biggest change was the streamlining of his deskwork. Recently, for instance, he appointed 476 postmasters with one scratch of the pen; before he would have had to sign his name 476 times on 476 different sheets. Now he signs just one list of appointments, then sends it to the Senate Clerk, who makes out the individual papers required for Senate approval. Such obvious short cuts - Ike's staff now wonders why they weren't taken long ago - have cut the tedious job of signing official papers by 60 per cent.

Visitors have been cut to an absolute minimum. No longer does Mr. Eisenhower trot toping our own hardtopidea-

It's PLAIN TO SEE that General Motors designers have stolen another march on the field. Not since they introduced the original hardtop has any body style so completely captured the public's fancy as the new four door hardtops now available in all GM cars.

No one has to tell you the reason these cars have set the fashion pace. You can see it in their dashing fore-to-aft sweep of roof and body lines unbroken by center window-posts—and by the way they combine sedan roominess and ease of entrance with an entirely new American concept of functional beauty.

They are dreams to handle, too, with extra reserves of power in their new higher-compression engines—instantly available at throttle-touch through their advanced automatic transmissions. And they are safety-engineered with many new improvements including Precision-Aimed headlights and Double-Locking door latches. Also, Power Steering, Power Brakes and Seat Belts are available.

Yes, in high performance, power and safety, just as in high fashion, you'll find the key to greater '56 value is the key to a General-Motors car.

TEEING OFF, lke eyes fairway during game before his attack. Doctors will let him start playing golf again in spring.

out to the Rose Garden several times a week to be photographed with different groups. And for the time being at least, new foreign ambassadors present their credentials to the Secretary of State rather than the President.

There are no more White House receptions, and that's one order lke obeys gratefully. He never did care for the ordeal of shaking each year the hands of half the Government officials, diplomats and correspondents in Washington.

Unchanged, though, are his four big meetings each week. On Tuesday he sees GOP Congressional leaders; on Wednesday he holds his press conference; on Thursday there's the National Security Council and on Friday the Cabinet. Scattered through the week are conferences with top officials, such as Secretary of State John Foster Dulles or Defense Secretary Charles Wilson.

With the drudgery of paper work cut down, Ike now gets to spend more time with his staff, a necessity if he's to catch up on work that went undone while he was in the hospital. Most important, though, he's got much more time to lie around "the house," as he calls his upstairs living quarters in the White House.

A President's Day

Ike rises at 7 a.m., is at work by 8:15. He spends the morning seeing people, knocks off at noon for lunch. Before, he nearly always had luncheon guests; but now he eats alone, takes a short rest either before or after lunch. He's back at his desk at 2, quits between 5:30 and 6:30.

Before dinner he usually takes a plunge in the heated White House pool. He and Mamie mostly eat alone, spend the evening watching movies in the special White House screening room (he prefers Westerns and musicals) or TV (Mamie's favorite). Sometimes they have a few friends in; occasionally they play the President's favorite card game, bridge.

By 10, though, Ike's in bed with a book (usually a Western), where he reads himself to sleep. He averages eight hours' sleep a night, a departure from his lifelong habit of getting by with only six.

The daily swim has taken the place of golfas exercise for the President. After his heart attack some of his doctors wanted him to put away his clubs forever, but his personal physician, Maj. Gen. Howard Snyder, pointed out that golf relaxed the President and Dr. Paul Dudley White, the Boston heart specialist, agreed. As a result, Ike gets to whack an occasional chip shot, will resume his games at the Burning Tree Country Club this spring.

Till then he's been told to do more walking for exercise. He strolls a great deal around the White House and on the lawn outside, but his pace is deliberately slower than before the attack. For relaxation he spends more time at an old hobby: painting. Wednesday afternoons, formerly reserved for a round at Burning Tree, now are spend in front of his easel.

The President eats pretty much as he always did, though he's strictly limited to 1,800 calories a day. Customary breakfast: fruit-juice, a single boiled egg, bacon, toast, black coffee. The doctors want him to stay at 172 pounds — his weight as a West Pointer, but 4 pounds lighter than at the time of his attack last September.

lke doesn't smoke, having given it up five years ago, but the doctors still allow him an occasional Scotch and water.

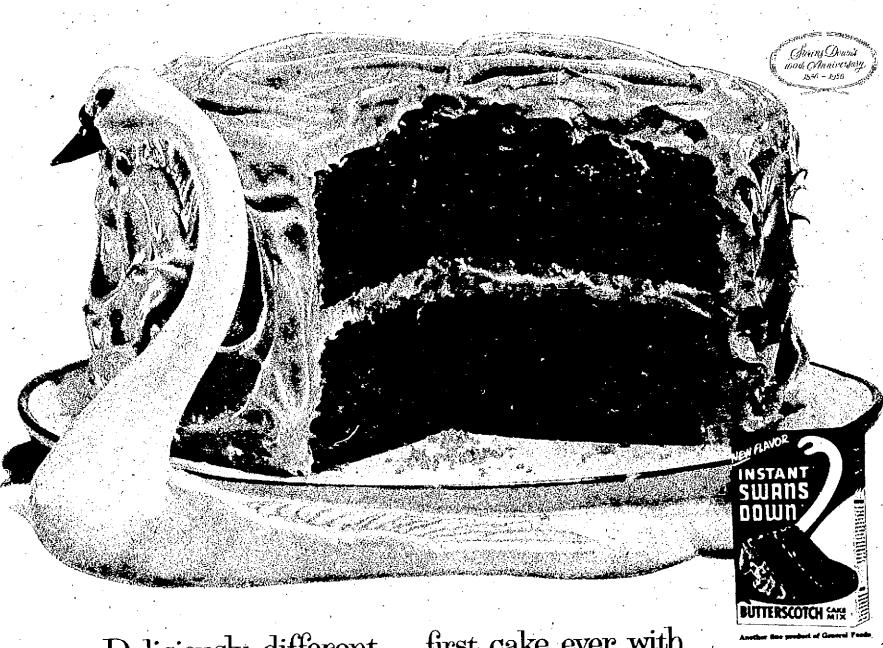

Is he a good patient? He couldn't be better, say the doctors. While he was relaxing at Key West earlier this year, he voluntarily refrained from fishing. Explained a Presidential aide to PARADE:

"Ike was afraid he might hook a big one. He's such a great sportsman that he knew he wouldn't be able to resist yanking it into the boat by himself. And that, he realized, would cause more strain than the doctors would like. So he just turned down the temptation and didn't go fishing."

Adds another assistant: "Ike has been under Army discipline long enough to know how to obey orders as well as how to give them."

At last—the answer to the question every American parent is asking:

Can Johnny read...or can't he?

New scientific studies show 90 per cent of our children can read—and why the other 10 per cent can't. Here are reassuring facts about your child, and what you can do to help him read confusion over whether or not its children can read. The fuss started in the wake of a book, Why Johnny Can't Read, by Rudolf Flesch, which cited the evidence: colleges said their students "couldn't read and couldn't learn"; younger children confused simple words like short and small; when they met unfamiliar words at any age, many youngsters simply guessed. The reason, Flesch said, was that schools had junked the old way of teaching reading as a series of sounds (phonics) and substituted a method of memorizing whole words (word recognition).

Educators began to take sides. Worried parents pounced on school boards and demanded a return to the "old ways." A whole chain of battles broke out; Flesch was denounced, praised, argued over. Above all, parents demanded: Could their children read? If not, why not? Who was to blame? What could be done about it? What were the facts about reading?

The facts, as gleaned by PARADE, are reassuring:

 The overwhelming majority of our 31 million school children can read, within their capacity to learn.

 Just as you may have trouble with certain words, so will some of them — but this doesn't make them problems.
 The objective of learning to read still is to understand the printed word, and the bulk of children can do this whether or not they stumble over occasional words.

About 10 per cent of our children, according to the most recent studies, are "problem readers" — which means they are significantly below their potential. But these children, with rare exceptions, are not retarded, stupid or slow. Their reading difficulty stems from causes other than intelligence. Thus, with special, painstaking instruction geared to their particular needs, most problem readers can be taught to read up to their capacity.

And the whole dispute about teaching methods is generally out of date. Possibly you've forgotten how you learned to read, but in most schools, 25 years or more ago, the process went like this. You memorized the sound of each letter. Then you slid the sounds together to form words. When you met a new word, you "sounded it out," letter by letter, until you had it. That is the phonic method.

But maybe you remember how puzzling it was to learn that c sometimes sounded like k and sometimes like s. Maybe you know that English refuses to conform to the rules of phonics; in the classic example, fish can be spelled ghoti (gh as in laugh, o as in women, ti as in action).

Educators, aware of this confusion, set out as early as the 1880s to find a better system of teaching. By the mid-1930s, the word-recognition method had been installed in many schools. This taught the child to memorize short words, so that he could "read" simple stories almost immediately. He was encouraged to learn more difficult words by a system of clues: looking for small words within big ones (dog and mat within dogniatic, for instance); guessing words from how they were used; learning by syllables; studying the outline of a word's shape.

But this system, too, proved less than perfect. Thus in the last 10 years many schools have tried a third tack: combining the best of word recognition and phonics. Today most children begin reading by memorizing about 200 basic words, which they meet again and again ("Run, run, run," said Dick) until they are firmly in mind. Then they backtrack, breaking the words down into letters and learning the sounds. The newer system of clues and the old system of phonics are used, as it were, in tandem.

Why has the phonic system made a comeback? Largely because of new, fresh insight into the hows and whys of reading. Probably the most thorough study of why children can't read has just been completed at the University of Michigan by a team headed by Dr. Ralph D. Rabinovitch, director of the children's service of the University's Neuro-psychiatric Institute.

In this six-year pioneering investigation, financed by the Field Foundation, much new information was charted. For one thing, problem readers were broken down into three major groups: primary (children who appear to have poor functioning in certain brain areas); secondary (children who have the capacity but haven't learned because of outside factors) and children with a "developmental lag," which means they are slow starters but should catch up.

In addition, the study learned a good deal about how children do learn to read, and this may be of wide help to teachers and worried parents. These findings have been implemented in the affiliated reading clinic, directed by Lucille Mozzi, and some new teaching systems devised.

What the fuss is about: words vs. phonics

TODAY'S WAY

PHONIC METHOD taught children to memorize sounds of each letter, slide them together to form words. New words were learned by "sounding out," letter by letter, until the child could pronounce the whole word.

Basically, Dr. Rabinovitch says, a child learns to read through his eyes and ears — but this means more than 20/20 vision and acute hearing. Involved are what he calls visual discrimination and memory and auditory discrimination and memory. Visual discrimination allows a child to look at a b and at a d and tell why they're different. Auditory discrimination enables him to hear a "buh" sound and distinguish it from "duh" or "tuh." And the memories enable him to hold onto those distinctions.

Dr. Rabinovitch explains the functions this way: "When I say to you, 'Spell memorandum,' what happens? Does the word seem to flash before you? That is your visual memory dominating your auditory. Or do you seem to repeat the word to yourself? That is your auditory memory."

Thus one person may think of a word as a series of sounds,

READING FOR SENSE, this boy arranges events in sequence to show he understands story. He needs help: an eighth-grader, he is three years behind age group.

Some children start slow, but catch up eventually another as a chain of letters. If you are a perfect reader (assuming one exists), you use them in balance. But if you are average, you probably rely more on one, just as you use one hand more than the other.

And this difference in persons has an emphatic bearing on the word-vs.-phonics controversy. One child may learn more easily by distinguishing between sounds. Another may learn by distinguishing letters. The skillful reading teacher must sharpen both abilities and impress both memories.

But the whole child is involved in reading — his personality, his family background, his experiences. "A child who never has seen snow will have trouble with the word snow," Miss Mozzi explains in a simple example.

And, just as one child may talk glibly at 2 and another not until 5, so some children are slow to start reading. These are the "developmental lag" group. For reasons science has not been able to pinpoint, most of them are boys. In one group of 40 helped by the reading clinic, only five were girls. Many boys can't cope with printed symbols until they are 8 or 9, although girls may eatch on readily at 6½. The only reason known is that boys are, in some ways, slower to mature than girls at this age.

The Child with Larger Problems

But like the child who doesn't talk until 3½ but is a chatterbox at 6, they may make up rapidly for lost time. Sometimes a late starter overtakes his classmates in three years. One boy, with Miss Mozzi's help, made up four years in 13 weeks. With others, the process is more painful. Exposed to reading before they could grasp it, they have been repeatedly frustrated; reading may hold dark terrors and awful embarrassments. Or they may suddenly be ready for reading in third grade — but the first two years are a blank, and they're in over their heads.

Late starters touched with frustration border on another group, called secondary non-readers because reading is only part of their problem. (Recently, a New York juvenile court reported that 76 per cent of its children, not including truants, had reading problems; most of these disturbed children would be classified as secondaries.) The secondary group includes children who "just don't have the urge to read"; children with emotional problems; children with too much home interference—and victims of poor teaching. Among children with mild reading problems, they are the majority:

A reason for part of the reading
problem: a shortage of trained teachers

Often their troubles are rooted in the family. Some have never had a story read to them; their parents never read more than necessary, and the children have the idea reading is of little importance. Some arrive in first grade unable to tell the front of the book from the back. They fall behind because the school must struggle against home indifference.

Just the opposite are children with too much interference at home. Some become panicky because their parents demand too much. "Why don't they leave me alone? is a sentence the remedial reading teacher hears again and again," Miss Mozzi says.

Or the trouble may stem simply from lack of companionship, One child tutored by Miss Mozzi had been yanked from place to place by nomadic parents; he had few friends, seldom talked and hence couldn't read.

When schools are as jammed as they are today, Miss Mozzi adds, it would be odd if some children didn't suffer from poor teaching. Because of this, some wind up frustrated and anxious.

And then there's another category.

Not long ago, a college freshman came to Dr. Rabinovitch for help. Although of high IQ, he was failing. After a short con-

How well can your child read? Try him on this test

At right are three sample paragraphs from the famed reading test devised by Dr. William S. Gray of the University of Chicago. Experience has shown, Dr. Gray says, that the average child at each of these levels can read the sample successfully. To measure up to the average, your child should be able to read his paragraph aloud in roughly 30 seconds with no more than five hesitations or errors. While only a section of the full test, the paragraph may indicate whether your child reads normally, needs special help or is advanced for his age group.

versation, the psychiatrist said, "Spell catastrophe.

"C-A-T-E-S -- " the boy began. Dr. Rabinovitch interrupted and repeated the word. The boy began again, "C-A-T-U-S -- "

This boy could not get a clear picture of a whole word. (With part words and skillful faking, he had managed to reach college.) Dr. Rabinovitch easily classified him as a primary non-reader, a group that includes the majority of the severe reading problems.

Words That Give Trouble

Like this boy, primaries are distinguished by poor visual and auditory memory. The most extreme may work for months before learning that words are spelled from left to right. Many can cling to simple, specific words like cat and run. but fail to grasp words that cannot be illustrated, like where, while, how. They may recite the alphabet flawlessly, yet not know offhand which letter follows q.

Traditionally, Dr. Rabinovitch says, these children were considered below par mentally. Yet they may not be retarded at all. In one group of 20 tested at Michigan, six showed superior intelligence when given IQ tests that involved performance and not use of words.

The nearest science can come to an explanation for the primary non-reader is that his higher brain centers do not function normally. (Persons with brain injuries bear this out; sometimes they "forget" how to read, although they can see, hear, talk and distinguish shapes of letters.) Various theories, including improper diet, birth injury and heredity, have been offered in explanation. But no one cause has eyer been pinned down.

Can such a child learn to read? Only within limits, Dr. Rabinovitch says. Many will never progress beyond the third-grade level. Even leading them that far may require considerable work, for they must cover the same ground again and again and still retain interest. The reading clinic gave one 12-year-old two and a half years of intensive instruction; at the end of that time, he read only at fourth-grade level.

For the secondary non-reader, the outlook is brighter. Counseling with parents may clear up home problems and remedial reading instruction, if available, can bring him up to his class level. Sometimes he needs only a display of someone's interest. With more severe cases, some kind of psychiatric treatment may be necessary. In any case, when the basic problem vanishes, often the reading difficulty goes too.

If your child lags behind in reading, is there anything you can do? Dr. Rabinovitch and Miss Mozzi say yes - and no. Since parents often are emotionally tied up with the problem, your attempts at corrective teaching may only reflect your impatience. But if you feel temperamentally equipped to help your child, consult his teachers and ask them to outline a program of home help. And you can band together with other parents to see that your schools have an adequate remedial reading program.

Best Bet: Start Early

Where parents can be of most help, Miss Mozzi says, is in creating a reading atmosphere, Parents should read to their children frequently, tell them stories, talk to them in language that is not baby-talk but will help them to understand words.

When the child shows an interest in a subject, he should be encouraged and helped to learn more about it from books. The result of such a home and school program should be better readers with a love for books that will last all their lives.

SECOND GRADE

Once there was a little pig. He lived with his mother in a pen. One day he saw his four feet. "Mother," he said, "what can I do with my feet?" His mother said, "You can run with them." So the little pig ran round and round the pen.

FIFTH GRADE One of the most interesting birds which ever lived in my bird-room was a blue-jay named Jackie. He was full of business from morning till night, scarcely ever still. He had been stolen from a nest long before he could fly, and he had been reared in a house long before he had been given to me as a pet.

SEVENTH GRADE

It was one of those wonderful evenings such as are found only in this magnificent region. The sun had sunk behind the mountains, but it was still light. The pretty twilight glow embraced a third of the sky, and against its brilliancy stood the dull white masses of the mountains in evident contrast.

FRUSTRATION: Two bells, two females—so who gets which one first, and why?

It never tolls for me

Bells, the man finds, are best left to women

by DICK EMMONS

The results of a recent house-wide survey reveal that I am the only person on the premises who does not lose his grip on things when the doorbell or telephone rings.

The survey also shows that my daughter, 7, and her mother, who is somewhat older, are the chief offenders. Neither of them is constitutionally able to let a bell ring more than once.

To avoid becoming a basket case when the doorbell sounds in the evening around our place, I instinctively draw my knees up tight against my chest and brace for the backlash as Helen and Ann thunder toward the portal.

The response is just as violent when the telephone rings. I have a loving memory of the night the doorbell and telephone pealed almost simultaneously. The room was filled with flailing female forms struggling to speed in both directions at once.

Usually, however, only one bell rings at a time and it becomes a pure question of Helen's experienced footwork versus Ann's youthful eagerness. The phone rang the other evening while the three of us were in a game of Chinese checkers.

"Whoops!" my wife shrilled, scattering the mathles as she left the starting block.

"Yikes!" my daughter squealed, upsetting her chair as she scrambled for the rail position. Ann got the receiver when her mother failed to brake in time and shot into the sewing room.

"Hello!" I heard. And then, "Oh ... It's for you, Daddy."

Thinking to teach my women something about the value of human dignity, I marched stiffly, head erect, toward the waiting telephone. Unfortunately, I also stepped on several of the runaway Chinese-checker marbles.

"He'll call you back later," I heard my wife say from a great distance as 1 probed for broken bones."

A ringing doorbell produces the same sort of temporary chaos. I suppose my daughter feels it is entirely possible that the Lone Ranger may turn up with Silver tethered to the porch swing. My wife, who should know better, is just as eager. She has never quite stopped believing that Robert Taylor will be standing there some evening, imploring her to take a spin along Upper River Drive in his cream convertible.

I decided a few nights ago that a small lesson was in order in the doorbell field, too. When the bell rang during dinner, I threatened my women back into their chairs with a salad fork, and answered the door myself. The task completed, I walked easily back and sat down.

"WHO WAS IT?" my girls shrieked.

A Name Is Dropped

I looked at them fondly, "Robert Taylor," "Who?" my wife whinnied.

"Robert" — I paused — "Taylor."

Helen gasped. "THE Robert Taylor?"

"I suppose you could call him that. He's the only Robert Taylor I know."

"Yes, but — I mean — didn't you — why didn't — glug — feep!"

"He wanted to take you for a ride in a new cream convertible. I told him we were eating dinner and if he wanted to come back some other time, you might be interested."

"AWK!" the girl said, going white and livid by turns.

For the next few days my wife maintained a stony silence, occasionally writing me terse notes like "Pick up clothes at cleaner" or "Take Ann to ballet class."

In the end I couldn't stand it any longer. The Robert Taylor who came to the door, I wrote, was a friend of mine who sells automobiles and wanted to demonstrate a cream convertible to her.

"You beast!" she wrote.

"Please forgive me," I wrote back humbly.

"On one condition," she penciled.

"What's that?" I scribbled eagerly ...

That's how we happen to be making payments on a new cream convertible, if you must know.

Red China: Moscow's mirror

New photos show propaganda at work

In the six-plus years since aggressive Communism won the upper hand in China, the outside world has speculated as to just how closely the Far Eastern Reds are following their teachers and backers in Russia. Now one point, at least, can be documented: The Chinese are applying Soviet propaganda tricks almost precisely as used in the U.S.S.R.

Proof lies in the exclusive photos on these and following pages. Those from Russia were made by PARADE photographer David Preston on his recent trip behind the Iron Curtain with Editor Jess Gorkin (PARADE, November 27, 1955). Those from China were taken by Pizzinelli, an Italian photographer who was one of a handful of European newsmen recently allowed to tour the country for the first time in years. (Americans still are harred.)

Placed side by side, these pictures show that, when it comes to influencing people, Peiping is Moscow's mirror.

Displays fan zeal of Red party faithful

In Red China today, photos of recordproduction workers adorn factory walls, Youth Corps members endlessly march, pictures and statues of party leaders loom in public places. As in Russia, this display is staged to fan party zeal among the 7 million "hard core" members Chinese Reds claim.

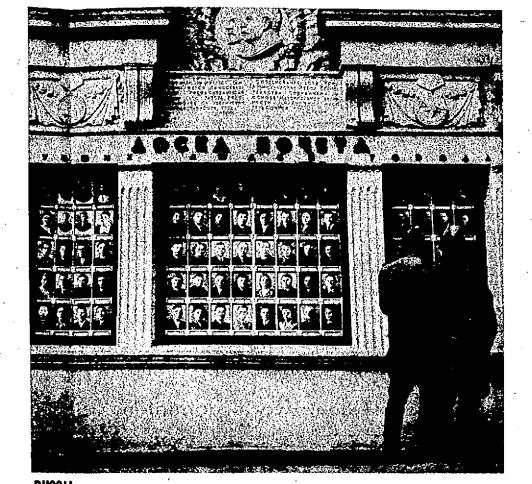

Close observers say China tries to imitate Russia politically and economically as well as ideologically. Says an expert of the American Committee for Liberation from Bolshevism, Inc.; "The Soviet Union and China treat each other as, partners in the 'Socialist camp of peace' and democracy."

A key word in that sentence is partners. Whatever else they may be, the Red Chinese have given more than one indication that they do not consider themselves Soviet stooges. This is something the U.S. State Department is watching closely. In the long run, it may be the tip-off on what Red China's outward aping of Russia really means.

by BOB FELLER as told to Carl Lundquist

CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Answer this question within 15 seconds: Which two players won the Most Valuable Player Awards for the 1955 season? Their names were announced just a few months ago, but I'm sure many baseball fans would have to think long and hard to recall them. If you doubt that, ask even a rabid fan to name the MVP winners in 1954. Chances are you'll stump him.

That same fan, though, could rattle off the names of the top players in World Series of long ago, the heroes of early All-Star games, many of the immortals in baseball's Hall of Fame.

What I'm getting at is this: To most fans and players too - the MVP Awards have no more importance or lasting interest than an old rain check.

FORD FRICK, Commissioner of Baseball, comments on this article: "I am sure that men like Bobby Feller and Robin Roberts have not won the MVP Award in certain years because they were pitchers. Now, with a separate Cy Young Award for hurlers, we'll give great pitchers the honor that is due them."

I know some people will say that's "sour grapes" on my part, since old Bobby has never won an MVP Award. But I don't mind any more (though it once used to rile me) because I've been looking around and thinking I'm in pretty good company. Take a look at the players who have not been picked by the baseball writers since they started voting for the MVP Awards

Babe Ruth, Mel Ott, Joe Cronin, Al Simmons, Schoolboy Rowe, Paul Waner, Bill Terry, Ralph Kiner, Pepper Martin, Paul Dean, Johnny Mize, Allie Reynolds, Bobby Doerr, Bill Dickey, Bob Lemon, Robin Roberts . . . Quite a list!

Any award that skips players such as those -- some of them even are in the Hall of Fame - obviously has something wrong with it. As I and a lot of other ball players see it, the fault rests with the way the MVP's are picked. Let me cite an instance in which I was personally involved.

In 1940 I won 27 games while losing 11. I struck out 261 to lead both leagues and had a 2.62 earned-run average, the lowest in the majors. We were in the thick of the pennant fight all the way but lost out in the last few days to Detroit. The Tigers' Hank Greenberg, who hit a walloping .340, won the MVP Award.

Today Hank's general manager of the Indians and my boss, but I'd say this to him even if he weren't: You're welcome to the Award, Hank, for it would have been sheer robbery if they'd given it to me instead. Nevertheless, I might have won if we had taken the pennant. That doesn't make any sense --- the Award should go to the most valuable player and not to the one who happens to be on the best team - but that's the way the writers have usually voted.

MOST VALUABLE PLAYER AWARDS? Let me tell you...

RAPID ROBERT FELLER fires his famed fast ball. During his 20 years with the Cleveland Indians he's hurled three no-hitters (a record), struck out 18 in a game (American League mark), 348 in a season (major-league record).

There are other things wrong with the voting, too, as that 1940 season showed. For what the writers were doing was comparing me, a pitcher, with Greenberg, a hitter, to determine which of us was more valuable to his team. Since hitting and pitching talents are so vastly different, it was like comparing apples to oranges.

Just last month — as you may or may not have heard — the major leagues finally set up the Denton T. (Cy) Young Award for pitchers. If this had been done earlier, Greenberg would have won the Most Valuable Player Award in 1940 without any embarrassing debate, while one of us much-neglected hurlers (we've won only 10 MVP's of the 50 awarded since 1931) would have received a Most Valuable Pitcher Award.

Now there'll be two separate Awards but—to give the MVP prize some lasting meaning—I'd like to see just one pitcher and one player named for both leagues (at present there's an MVP for each league). Sure, a pitcher and a player from the same league might monopolize the Awards in some years but let's face it: our league is sometimes better than the National and sometimes they're better than we are. The MVP vote would be a way to compare them.

The voting, in my opinion, should also be changed to make it more democratic. It now is limited to 48 sportswriters who cover the 16 major-league teams. Like anybody else, reporters have their favorites; the guys who travel with the Indians die when we lose. As a result, reporters are not always so objective when it comes to voting. By letting some other groups yote, I think you'd erase a lot of home-town favoritism. Here's the committee I'd suggest:

- · A fan for each big-league team.
- A player from each team.
- The manager of each club.
- · A reporter to represent each team.
- Eight umpires from each league, since nobody knows ball players better than the unbiased men who watch us closely every day.

Snider vs. Campanella

Too many cooks might spoil the broth? I doubt it; the system would be more foolproof, in fact, than the present one (which picked Yogi Berra and Roy Campanella in '55, Willie Mays and Berra in '54). Each writer names 10 players with 14 points going for his first choice, nine for second, eight for third and so on. Well, in 1955 one writer accidentally named Campanella twice — for first and sixth place — but left out Duke Snider, whom everybody else mentioned.

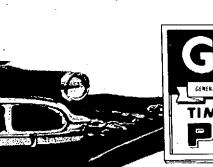

Not wanting to be accused of tampering, the committee didn't check back with the writer, gave Campy 14 points for the first-place vote, nothing to Snider. Campy beat Duke by five points — five that Snider probably would have gotten if the writer hadn't erred.

If that's the way the Awards are going to be determined, I'm almost glad I never won.

INCOME TAX RETURNS Prepared HERE

Are income-tax 'experts' SAFE?

Most are honest, but more and more want to turn you into a crook. Here's how to spot them.

by JACK ANDERSON and FRED BLUMENTHAL PARADE WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENTS

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Now that income-tax season is in full cry, tax "experts" have been setting up service in such unlikely places as barber shops, novelty stores, pool halls, real-estate offices. Their signs promise: "Deductions you never knew you had! Refunds guaranteed or no charge!"

These self-styled experts prey on citizens who want to try the dangerous game of finding tax short cuts. While most tax consultants know their business, more and more have no training whatever. Their only service is to suggest ways the taxpayers might cheat on their returns.

Barring a moral or mental miracle, the Internal Revenue Service will find errors in one-fourth of the 60 million income-tax returns due midnight April 15. Most of these will be unintentional. But many will be the work of the tax shysters who encourage petty fraud for a fee.

To help prevent this and show how clumsily the tax crooks operate, PARADE recently prepared a fictitious W-2 Withholding Statement and sent a correspondent out with it to seek "expert" help. This was done with the approval of Internal Revenue, which checked the amounts on the statement: $5,029 in salary from a local utility company and withholding deductions of $790.40 for a single man without dependents. A legitimate return would show the taxpayer still owed the Government $33.34.

PARADE's reporter picked an "expert" who advertised: "Tax troubles? Bring your form and your records to me. I'll save you money. Refund guaranteed." That last usually is a tip-off, the tax-enforcement men said. No tax adviser can guarantee a refund and stay within the law.

The address was a real-estate office not far from the Treasury Department itself. Inside, a pleasant, soft-spoken young man promised he could save his new client money "no matter what."

"What did you contribute to charity last year, Mac?" he inquired. The reporter said not enough to keep account; but the "expert" wrote down "Contributions, $100"—to, among others, the Salvation Army, the Red Cross and the Daughters of the American Revolution.

"Since you aren't married, maybe you have a mother you help to support?" he suggested. The reporter replied that his mother was self-supporting but that he paid $384.17 for board and room at home. The adviser promptly wrote down: "$384.17 mortgage payment on mother's house," and added; "$277.80, real estate tax on mother's home."

There were more questions. Did the client have anything stolen during the year? No, said the reporter. Where did he go for vacation? Florida. Down went another lie: "$50, suitcase stolen while on Florida vacation."

Total deductions when the "expert" finished were $811.97—enough to substitute a fraudulent refund of $21.57 for the honest $33.34 tax debt. Fee: $5.

At Internal Revenue, the fraud-packed form drew a loud whistle. A routine audit, the agents explained, would land the taxpayer in serious trouble. Without receipts for the fictitious mortgage and real-estate payments, a 50 per cent fraud penalty could be imposed. If the fraud was deliberate, criminal prosecution might follow.

Here We Go Again

A second tax counselor, this one a fat, heavily rouged, white-haired woman, proved as shady as the first. She operated from a cluttered living room near the U.S. Capitol. For PARADE's reporter, she quickly pyramided charity deductions to $500. She suggested a $250 claim for their of luggage and real-estate taxes on his mother's house, but missed on mythical mortgage payments. At the end, the Government "owed" the reporter $78, and the phony tax specialist charged $10 for 12 minutes work. "Honey, I've been doing this for 25 years," she bragged. "I'm careful. None of my returns ever run foul."

At Internal Revenue, enforcement officials disputed this boast. So many of the woman's clients submit bad returns that her name on a form means an automatic audit. Last year they thought there was enough evidence against her to prosecute but, it developed, the prosecution witnesses already had disqualified themselves by signing fraudulent returns.

"If you decide to consult a private tax practitioner, be sure he is well qualified," begs the Internal Revenue Service in a special statement to PARADE. "You can get the names of such experts from any business association, your bank or bankers association; your lawyer or bar association; from local associations of certified or public accountants; or from Better Business Bureaus and Chambers of Commerce."

The taxpayer who ignores this warning, not the tax quack, gets it in the neck if Internal Revenue cracks down. The "expert" can claim his client furnished the fraudulent figures, since there's no witness to swear otherwise. And the taxpayer, not his adviser, must swear to the return. If it proves a fraud, he pays or goes to jail.

In reality, Internal Revenue insists, the average taxpayer seldom needs a private consultant. The advice he needs isn't too complicated. And Internal Revenue agents stand ready to help. They are there not to boost the tax take but to give honest advice. Again and again, they surprise citizens by suggesting overlooked deductions.

"Many taxpayers pay out money for just being lazy," an enforcement official told parame. "They go to some shady character, and he gives them a still bill. If they came down here, we'd help them for nothing."

A large percentage of my mail comes from the sub-teen group. I sincerely sympathize with the young girl who suddenly becomes really interested in her future dating possibilities and gets herself into a state of needless anxiety about her personal appearance. Here are three letters from this age group.

Q. I am a 12-year-old girl with three problems; 1) I am overweight and my mother won't let me go to a doctor. 2) Most of my girl friends have clathes that are bought readymade; I have none. 3) My father won't let me go to school dances.— C. T., Baton Rouge, La.

A. In your own opinion you may be overweight because your friends are thinner than you are, but in the eyes of a doctor you may not be. At your age it is considered wise to be 10 pounds over the normal. If you are a lot more than that, you should make a sincere effort to cut down on sweets and starches as well as fats. You need plenty of bone-building protein and calcium.

Q. Lam a 12-year-old girl and my mether thinks I am too young to go out on dates in the afternoon. May we have your epinion? -D.S., St. Petersburg, Fla.

A. What other nice girls in your own group do is usually a fairly good criterion of what your parents can safely let you do. But the decision must rest with the parents; they know the circumstances and can judge the company you keep.

Q. At 13, is it all right for me to like a boy shorter than I? Am I too young to go steady? _ L.R., Chicago, III.

A. Why shouldn't you like a boy shorter than yourself? Yes, 13-year-olds are much too young to go steady.

HOLLYWOOD.

One recent evening a siender, one-cyed man boarded a United Airlines DC-7 in Honolulu. He sat down quietly, fastened his seat belt, smiled perfunctorily at the young lady sitting next to him.

The plane took off. Presently the young lady asked the man what business he was in.

"The motion-picture game," he answered.

"What's your name?"

"Raoul Walsh."

"I'm sorry," the young lady apologized, "but I've never heard of you."

Walsh grinned. "There's no reason why you should. I'm only a director."

And that's true. But, as anyone-who knows pictures will tell you, the director usually (some people say always) is the key to a film's artistic success. And Raoul-Walsh has directed more major motion pictures than any man alive. Last month, when he finished The Revolt of Mamie Stover, starring Jane Russell, his total hit an even 100.

Since 1912, when he first went to work for the great D. W. Griffith, Walsh has been a vital and romantic part of virtually every Hollywood milestone. He accompanied Pancho Villa through Mexico as part-time cameraman and part-time general. He played John Wilkes Booth in the Griffith classic, The Birth of a Nation. Hc worked in front of the camera with Gloria Swanson, who was so charmed by him that she insisted he play her leading man in Sadie Thompson.

In the past 40 years he has directed at one time or another almost every hig name in Hollywood history: Douglas Fairbanks, Theda Bara, Bing Crosby, Marion Davies, Gregory Peck, Gary Cooper, Janet Gaynor, Humphrey Bogart and dozens more.

His director credits; starting with Regeneration in 1915, reflect every stage of motion-picture growth from silent tworeclers to stereophonic, wide-screen epics. Such hits as Carmen, Evangeline, The Thief of Bagdad, What Price Glory?, In Old Arizona, High Sierra, The Horn Blows at Midnight, Cheyenne, White Heat, Captain Hornblower, Distant Drums, Buttle Cry, The Tall Men - all bear the Walsh stamp. The combined box-office gross of his films totals approximately $150,000,000 and reflects his conviction that movies should be long on sex, pace and adventure, short on intellectualism, symbolism and subtlety.

"I make pictures," Walsh explains, "10 entertain people, not to educate them. In my scheme of things the relationship between man and woman is the most important factor in life. Love is what makes the world go round, and that's what I fry to show on film.

"Some people think I'm too raw. But that reputation is just an outgrowth of the trouble we had on What Price Glory?

Glory was produced in 1925-26, and in those days of silent film-making it was

Victor McLaglen (I.) and Edmund Lowe appear in a typical scene from What Price Glory?, a Walsh opus about two girl-chasing buddies in France in World War I.

sporty to see how much a man could get away with on the screen. Walsh particularly derived great pleasure in seeing to it that an actor's screen mouthings never matched the subtitles.

A vigorous, uninhibited war picture, What Price Glory? featured a peck of fourletter words spoken by Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe. The printed titles, of course, did not synchronize with or reflect the lip movements. The picture was seen by 50 million people, including, according to Walsh, "practically every deaf-mute in the world." Hundreds of letters flocked into the studio, condemning the language of the actors. Meanwhile the film itself was becoming the biggest grosser of the decade.

Kind Words for Jane

At one time Walsh himself was a prolific employer of the colorful epithet, but of late he has developed a surprising verbal mildness. When Jane Russell, for example, "hlew" her lines in Mamie Stover two days in a row, Walsh walked up to her and said kindly, "Girlie, I want you to learn the lyrics tonight."

Jane smiled. "Will do, Daddy-O," she said. And she did.

Several years ago, however, when Walsh was making Gentleman Jim with Errol Flynn, the actor stubbornly refused to heed the director's instructions. His patience exhausted, Walsh approached Flynn, "I'm a little tired," he said, "of your pig-headed behavior. Why don't we step outside and settle our differences man to man?" That ended that.

Walsh first learned to use his fists in New York City, where he was born 60-odd years ago. His father, a commercial artist, even sent Raoul to his brother's ranch in Texas to keep him out of street fights. In Texas young Walsh learned to ride and buildog steers.

When he returned East he learned that the infant motion-picture industry, then operating in New Jersey, was looking for men who knew how to mount and ride a horse. He hired out as rider and "Indian" for $5 a day.

His family exerted pressure to get Walsh into Columbia University, but he was smitten with movies. When D. W. Griffith offered to take him to California as a general assistant, the youngster joined him on the first train West.

Once here, Griffith decided to make a film on the life of Pancho Villa. He selected Walsh to go to Mexico and make a deal with the rebel. Walsh managed to establish contact with Villa across the Rio Grande from El Paso. What transpired next is a story Walsh tells with relish.

"Villa asked me what I wanted," he narrates, "and I told him that I wanted to do a story on the injustices to the Mexican peon that he had set out to correct. 'One day, General Villa,' I told him, 'you'll be

You can save a lot of calories by sweetening with Sucaryl and you can't taste the difference

Sucaryl is for weight-watchers. It gives you all sugar's sweetness without bitterness or aftertaste—with no calories at all.

This is the first non-caloric sweetener that tastes exactly like sugar in ordinary use. In fact, you use it practically anywhere you would sugar. Sucaryl makes an ideal sweetener for coffee or tea, fruit or cereal. Cooks, bakes, or freezes without losing its sugar-like sweetness. Look for Sucaryl on the label when you're shopping for dietetic foods and beverages. (They don't taste like "diet" foods.)

Sucaryl, of course, is intended for dieters and diabetics. Sugar gives you quick energy, and has its place on normal diets. But where calories must be trimmed out, Sucaryl lets you do it without giving up sweetness. If you're in doubt about your diet, ask your doctor.

You can get Sucaryl at your drug store in Tablet, or Solution form. For low salt diets, ask for Sucaryl Calcium. And be sure you pick up your free copy of Abbott's new "Calorie-Saving Recipes with Sucaryl." Just ask your druggist! Abbott Laboratories, North Chicago, Ill. and Montreal.

Sucaryl

Non-Calorio Sweetener-No Bitter Aftertaste

A moment from The Thief of Bagdad finds Douglas Fairbanks striking an athletic pose by the bedside of a horem beauty. This epic filled Walsh's demand for adventure, romance.

In his spare time he raises dogs-but he doesn't have much spare time

Another Walsh action drama, Battle Cry, catches Tab Hunter and Mona Freeman between Marine Corps fights.

President of Mexico and you'll ride into Mexico City at the head of your troops and the people will cheer because you're a good and great man and you'll sit down in front of your desk and smoke a big cigar and put your feet on the table and really rule this country.' Well, he ate it all up and said I could have anything I wanted."

Walsh joined Villa's troops, rode with them on their raids and cattle drives and photographed all their activities.

"The stuff I shot," he says, "you wouldn't believe. Those fellows took their own cattle along. On train rides they had hundreds of women. Villa himself was very vain. He'd constantly ride up and back in front of my cameras. On one raid he captured 500 prisoners. He would execute a few each day. In deference to me he'd postpone the slaughter from dawn until 8:30 when the light was better.

"The executions would be held with the soldiers watching. They'd stand with rocks in their hands and when it was over, they'd race in and batter the gold out of the teeth of the dead.

"Villa made me an honorary general and wanted me to stay with the troops. But I had had enough. I took the film and got out. Before I left Villa gave me a million dollars in Mexican currency that he'd printed. By the time I got to the border it was worth 12 cents.

When I ran the footage in the projection room, people got sick. But Griffith put the picture together and it was called The Life of Pancho Villa. It still shows up on the Mexican circuit every now and then."

Following this, Walsh was cast by Griffith as John Wilkes Booth in The Birth of a Nation. For realism in the scene where Booth leaps onto the stage after assassinating Lincoln, Griffith loosened a spur on Walsh's boot. "When you jump," Griffith told him, "catch your foot in the flag and act as if you broke it."

Walsh made the leap, and Griffith shouted, "Wonderful, Wonderful, Raoul!"

"Wonderful?" echoed Waish furiously.
"I've broken my ------- knee!".

How to Lose on Eye

Presently Walsh was hired by William Fox as a director at $400 a week. He stayed with Fox 10 years, working with top stars. In 1928 he was chosen to direct the first outdoor talking film ever made: In Old Arizona, based on O. Henry's Cisco Kid stories.

Walsh started the picture playing the lead himself. Between takes he got restless and decided to race his car across the desert hunting jackrabbits. In one such race a jackrabbit leaped high into the air and crashed through Walsh's windshield. A glass splinter lodged in his right eye, whereupon Walsh gave up the acting stint.

For a replacement he chose Warner Baxter, whom he directed into an Academy Award-winning performance.

The picture finished, Walsh decided to go East to have his injured eye treated. He checked into a New York hospital at 4 one afternoon, was given a local anesthetic, had the eye removed. At 6, word having gotten around that he was in town, Walsh was visited by Mayor Jimmy Walker with a thermos jug of cocktails. Walker was scheduled to be toastmaster at a dinner on the Astor Roof that night and urged Walsh to go with him. After sampling the jug at length, Walsh got out of bed, dressed, placed a bottle cork in his eye socket, covered it with tape and headed for the party. Next morning he caught a train to California and collapsed in his compartment, the cork popping out.

Said the doctor who was called in to treat him, "Anyone who can drink the way you can has nothing to worry about. Put the cork back in and keep going."

Today he wears an eye-patch — black by day, white by night.

Watching Walsh at work'is a fascinating sight. He dresses in high-heeled boots and Marine Corps fatigues, never sits down, punctuates his directions with humorous unprintable cracks. From a sack of Bull Durham he constantly rolls eigarettes, frequently giving the impression that he's a naive Western cowhand.

Married in 1947 to Mary Simpson, a nonprofessional, he raises Kerry Blue Terriers out in the San Fernando Valley when he isn't working. Such periods are rare. In the words of his wife, "Inactivity turns Raoul into a nervous wreck. If he's not directing a picture he's got to be preparing one, or he becomes absolutely miserable."

What of Tomorrow?

After four decades in the motion-picture industry, Walsh has some definite ideas about its future.

"Nowadays," he maintains, "you've got to make hig pictures. Once in a while a sleeper like Marty comes along, but that's the exception. Movies must have scope and breadth, and you can't make 'em on the back lot any longer. If a story is laid in Honolulu like Mamie Stover, you've got to shoot it in Honolulu, give the public authentic backgrounds for their money. And color, too.

"The public is becoming more entertainment-wise day by day. They're even getting wise to the same old extras we use. That's why for Mamie I hired a bunch of kids from UCLA for soldiers.

"The most important ingredient in most pictures," director Walsh sums up, "is still going to be sex. You can't get away from it. That's why Jane Russell is worth $200,000 a picture, and Lassie is on television."

Is this rare soap from Belgium worth $1 a cake?

We think it is. You'll think so two after you read this 3-minute story. 🦚

Do you know you can make your skin sing? Ordinary soaps (even costly ones) can't do it. Neutrogena can! Sounds crazy? Well, try this simple experiment: Pass a wet finger over the rim of a crystal glass. You'll hear a pleasant ring. After you've used Neutrogena, let your finger stroke your skin and it too will sing.

So even if you're "tone-deaf" to all the wonder-claims made about soaps, listen:

Neutrogena is the crowning achievement of a famed pharmaceutical chemist, Dr. Fromont of Brussels. There have been 4 generations of physicians in his family; hence his lifelong interest in chemistry.

Dr. Fromont has long known what most people do not know about toilet soaps: They are just combinations of fats or oils-to which are added caustic soda, lanolin or other waxes. Result? They all have an alkaline reaction.

This is why they dry and shrivel the skin they are supposed to beautify. And this is why skin specialists advise so many women not to use any kind of soap.

Neutrogena, on the other hand, is not a soap in the ordinary sense. It is virtually a solidified toilet cream made foamy and as neutral as pure water. You can wash your hands 50 times a day (as physicians anddentists do) and the skin will not dry or peel. You can use it anywhere on the body with equal results: hands, face, armpits, feet. Your whole body feels fresher and lighter. Your skin sings! (Yes, you can even brush your teeth with it -it's so pure.)

Do you see now why this rare soap from Belgium is worth much more than $1 a cake? Why not go to your cosmetic counter today and get your first precious cake of Neutrogena? If your favorite store has not yet stocked it, fill out coupon below and send 10e for generous trial-size.

A Bullet for the Yacht Captain

By Vera Williams

(Editor's Noie: This is the first of a series of stories of unsolved crimes in the Long Beach area. Others in the series will appear from time to time in Southland.)

WITO KILLED Capt. Waiter Wanderwell?

Slaying of the world-traveler and adventurer, shot in the back aboard his yacht Carma in Long Beach Harbor the night of Dec. 5, 1932, remains this city's great unsolved murder.

Who killed him and why may be the No. I mystery not only of Long Beach but of California and the Pacific Coast. Police detectives, newspapermen, fiction writers have worked on it off and on for a generation. Most of them have come up with theories, and plausible suspects. The only thing is that the theories and the suspects do not agree. Most think Wanderwell was slain by a man; a few think it could have been a woman. Was it an enemy who came from around the world Was it someone, to kill him? perhaps, on his own yacht?

WAS HE KILLED for love, for revenge, for fear, for greed? How much — or how little — did a note in Spanish which disappeared from his billfold have to do with his death?

Valurian Johannes Tieczynski, German Pole better kinowin on four continents as Capt. Wanderwell, had been everywhere, done everything — and practically every place he had been, he left enemies

He had faced danger and death in the wastes of Siberia, in Indian jungles, on Arabian deserts and at sea.

Then, about 9:30 that fateful night of Dec. 5, 1932, in a cabin on a former rum boat in quiet Long Beach Harbor he fell with a bullet in his heart, shot from behind. Ten feet away his two small daughters slept, unmindful of the tragedy.

CAPT. WANDERWELL held in his hand a ring of keys as if he had been about to open a cash box or a safe. In his wallet in his pocket was $600. A note written in Spanish which crew members said had been in his wallet was gone.

His wife, the beauteous blond Aloha, was said to be in Hollywood at that time. Many crew members were ashore.

Those tell on board said a man in a gray overcoat with the collar turned up and a cap pulled over his eyes, stopped at the mess room porthole.

"Is Capt. Wanderwell here?" he asked,

HE WAS DIRECTED to the captain's quarters. They heard his footsteps on the deck; they heard the door open; they heard Wanderwell say "Hello!" in a tone, not of fear, but of some surprise.

Shortly, a shot rang out. They rushed to the captain's quarters. They gray-coated stranger was gone, Capt. Wanderwell was dead.

A dragnet promptly was put out for William J. (Curly) Guy, 24-year-old Welsh soldier of fortune who recently had trouble with Wanderwell in a Los Angeles apartment. They had had a violent argument, it was said, because Wanderwell had put Guy and Guy's young wife off a Wanderwell ship in Panama a year or so before and Guy wanted his passage money back.

GUY WAS LOCATED in a deserted house and was brought to trial — the only one who ever was tried for the Wanderwell killing.

A personable young man with curly black bair, a nice smile and deferential manners, Guy said:

"I hated Capt. Wanderweil. I had good reason to hate him. I would have liked to kill him. But I never would shoot a man in the back."

The two-master schooner Carma :— "yacht" always was a figure of speech — was confiscated with 232 cases of liquor aboard by federal authorities in Fish Harbor here in July 1932.

THE FOLLOWING October, Capt. Wanderwell bought her for $2,500 at a marshal's sale and despite warnings by navigation authorities that she was unseaworthy fitted her up for a cruise to the South Seas.

A "crew" was recruited, plus Capt. Wanderwell and his wife, Aloha, on a part-work, part-pay basis, and they expected to leave in mid-December for Honolulu, the first leg of the South Seas trip. The vessel was lettered, "International Police R. E." Nobody remembers what "R. E." meant but the rest was part of Wanderwell's dream of organizing an international police force.

This "crew" included:

Tremendous Teddy, giant Kodiak bear at left, gave scientists a scare before he was taken for this family group in County Museum,

The Tale of the Tremendous Teddy'

MILD - MANNERED, bespectacled Mel Lincoln, senior curator of the Los Angeles County Museum, is a man whom Davy Crockett would have envied. Davy is credited with some mighty tall yarns about his prowess as a bear stalker, but he never brought home a threequarter ton, 8-foot, 8-inch high bruin to prove them. In fact, he probably would have denied that a bear of such size even existed.

But Lincoln is one up on Crockett there. Not only did he face a brown behemoth of those dimensions on Kodiak Island, Alaska, recently, but he brought the critter back to Los Angeles as evidence. "Tremendous Teddy," as the museum staff dubbed the outsize bear, now awes visi-tors as the "star" of curator

Lincoln's impressive diorama, "Alaskan Habitat Group," ac-claimed as one of the world's finest museum displays of its

The tale of Tremendous Teddy and how he became a Southland celebrity began more than 20 years ago. In 1934 the Los Angeles County Museum decided to feature, as major attractions, spectacular dioramic displays showing mounted animals, birds and reptiles in natural poses amid authentic, realistic settings of their particular habitats. Researchers, scenic artists, lighting experts, skilled laxidermists and zoologists worked to make the displays as spectacular as any to be seen anywhere.

"WE HAD MANY fine animal specimens when the work started," curator Lincoln recalls, "and as time went on we obtained more." But in planning the Alaskan habitat group we found ourselves literally 'stumped by a

The museum acquired three fine mounted Alaskan Kodiaks -a female specimen and two cubs - but no giant male, which is the spectacular member of the Kodiak species. The "family group" remained incomplete.

"There are only about 5,000 giant Kodiaks left alive in the world," Lincoln explains, "and very few mounted specimens available anywhere. We wanted a big fellow at least eight feet tall so we decided to wait until we could secure a specimen that would be a real attention getter."

Years passed and the museum's displays became world renowned for their lifelike beauty and authenticity of setting. Lincoln, however, was not satisfied. He still wanted a king size "papa" Kodiak for his husbandless mama bear and her two fatherless cubs.

Then, early in 1952, curator Lincoln arranged with the U.S. Fish and Wikllife Service to lead a hunting expedition into one of Die Alaskan brown bear's last surviving strongholds, Kodiak Island, in the hinterlands of the

THIS FORMIDABLE, bleak island is a 100-mile-long by 10 to 60-mile-wide Federal Wildlife Refuge where giant Kodiaks are protected by government wardens. Some of these enormous animals -- the Kodiak is the largest carnivorous beast on earth - reach a height of nearly 10 feet when standing erect, and the weight of one of these bruins sometimes exceeds 2,000 pounds, according to unofficial

The Los Angeles County Museum expedition, headed by curafor Lincoln, includel Herman T. Beck, the institution's taxidermist; J. Robert Sewell, background artist, who took color photos and made sketches of the bear's habitat, and Roy R. Linsley, U. S. Fish and Wildlife biologist, of Juneau, Alaska.

Setting up a camp on Kodiak Island in early May 1952, the group spent several days exploring the area, making photos and sketches and observing Alaskan wildlife in its natural state. They also kept a sharp eye out for Kodiak bears, too, partly because they hoped to spot a likely specimen for the museum and partly because the animal is a ferocious giant that can - and will -- attack any invader of his bailiwick, whether it be human or animal, with ruthless, lethal intent.

"A KODIAK'S strength is almost unbelievable," Lincoln de-"His powerful jaws can snap a 2x4 timber in two like a tooth pick, and his saber-like claws can slash a man to ribbons within a minute. Homesteaders in Alaska fear the Kodiak as if he were a monstrous demon of destruction, as indeed he is when provoked "

Because they were loaded down with cameras, sketching equipment and other impedimenta of their trades, the museum men seldom went armed, leaving the job of bagging a suitable specimen to biologist Lins-"If we'd known at the time that in all his 20 years with the Wildlife Service, Linsley had never shot a bear, we'd have been even more wary," Lincoln said. "It was a perfect case of ignorance is bliss."

Then one day as Lincoln, Beck and Sewell were returning to camp from a field trip without Linsley, who was scouting on his own, they shared an adventure that none of them will ever for-

OWE WERE plodding through a stand of four-foot-high tundra grass when we heard a lowpitched grunt ahead of us. Presently a luige male Kodiak began to rise on his hind legs, not 20 feet away, and glared at us. That critter rose higher and higher until his massive head seemed to touch the sky. He looked as tall as a three-story building, with bulk to match. Stunned at the spectacle, we froze in our tracks, looked at each other and then at our 'armament," consisting of two miniature cameras, a pair of binoculars and a sketch pad with drawing pencil!

"We looked around wildly for a tree, knowing that Kodiaks can't elimb trees when full grown. There was a tree a little one — in sight. But as luck would have it, that danged tree was between us and the

"It didn't take long to decide. We made for that tree like Olympic sprinters. I was bringing up the rear and, in the headlong dash, my foot caught in a root and I fell flat on my face. I don't recall getting up but I guess I didn't hesitate because I still beat Sewell and Beck to

"MEANWHILE, THE beat just stood still, ears back, huge jaws agape. As we plunged to-ward him, hellbent for the proteeting branches of the tree, he looked at us in amazement. Apparently he thought he was being attacked by a trio of strange

By Jack B. Kemmerer

MAN'S HOME is his castle."
Cabot Yerxa, 75-year-old desert artist, is a firm believer of the old adage, and has built part of his soul into the thick adobe walls and massive timbers of his "castle" rising like a magician's handiwork amid the greasewood and boulders of the barren coun-

For nine years he has been constructing one of the most fan-tastic structures in the American desert. The eastle, growing out of a hill of the San Gorgonio Mountains in Desert Hot Springs, near Palm Springs, follows the architecture of the Hopi Indians. Already, 30 rooms have materialized under the roofs rising on many levels. Already, five fireplaces and numerous rock walls have been fash-ioned for comfortable living. Outside, Yerxa is still digging foundations and creeting walls for more rooms, even he doesn't know how many rooms the house will have. At 75 his ambition is boundless, and his determination equals his physical provess, which is amazing.

DESCENDED FROM JOHN CABOT, discoverer of Newfoundland, he has had the same roving temperament as his illustrious forefather. Leaving home at the age of 17, he went to Alaska, and on to an adventurous career that carried him all over the world.

Arriving in Palm Springs in 1913, Yerva led a rugged life in the desert wastelands, "My home then," he relates, "was just a hole dug in a clay bank, with a few palm leaves overhead. It had no floor, no doors or windows, no bed, no table. I ate and slept on the graphs in all provides." the ground in all weather."

Out of that first home grew his desire for a big house like the Hopi Indians built. The rooms of this new structure are of every conceivable shape and size: Every window is different—a study in patterns and angles.

HE SEARCHED THE DESERT far and wide for old timbers and ties to give an authentically antique appearance to his house.

"It'll look 100 years old when I get it done," Yerxa boasts,

Primarily, the house is intended to be an art gallery and a museum. Yerxa intends to install his collection of paintings in it, his specialty being portraits of Indians.

Yerxa is credited with discovering the first hot well in Desert Hot Springs, a 132-degree marvel, close to a cold wetl.

He stood in a deep hole in buckets of cold water to keep the rising hot water from scalding him as he completed the digging of the shaft. Both the bot and cold well are located in the kitchen of his new home.

Now, as he contentedly milks his goat and looks proudly at his house rising with Hopi charm in the midst of the desert, Cabot Yerxa says quietly, "No hurry, plenty of time."

Thirty rooms have already materialized in this house but Yerxa pours more foundations, hasn't set limit.

Cabot Yerxa is capping a life of adventure by building an adobe castle in the desert, modeling it after the Hopi Indians' method of architecture.

When Louis Lagler began hoarding cigar boxes a decade ago, he had in mind building this miniature Swiss chalet. Lagler, retired, is an active hobbyist.

WHAT'S YOUR HOBBY?

Beauty from Discards

By Ellen Saunders

GRANDMA MOSES and Louis—used tin soldered together made hagler, 736 Loma Vista Dr., have a great .deal in common. Each has carved a new career out of childhood memories. Not that Lagler, a 60-year-old exrancher has achieved the fame of Grandma Moses but ever since he sculptured a gleaming white castle from plaster of Paris and constructed a Swiss chalet from discarded eigar boxes two years ago, enough miniature golf course owners have requested that he beautify their greens with similiar structures to bring him out of retirement.

This development is no surprise to many Long Beach residents who already know the Swiss-born Lagler as a top-notch bone carver who can transform shank bones into exquisite cameos, rangs and brooches the rich cream color of old ivory. To them it is just one more example of this self taught artist's ability to produce beauty with the aid of a few simple tools and a minimum amount of cash.

A FILE, pen knife, backsow, vise, sandpaper and a carborundum saw completes Lagler's equipment. The small cash outhe requires is due to his ability to utilize commonplace and cast-off material. For instance he has built many medicval Swiss castles in miniature from discarded fire bricks by halving their heat-blackened exteriors and using the undamaged side for the facing of the structures.

His two-storied Swiss chalet, exact replica of his childhood home, complete even to the same old-fashioned, hand shingled roof, is built almost entirely from mahogany obtained from eigar boxes he has boarded for over a decade. Broken bits of flagstone and slate were used in making the large patio and terrace which surrounds the chalet. Strips of the iron railings and the grill,

AMERICAN EAGLES which adorn each of the three gates were hammered out of old copper pipe. Field stones furnish the pillars which support the iron railings. Lagler picked them up in the Palos Verdes hills-exposed their bright yellow centers with his carborundum saw-then cut them into colorful blocks. The small benches scattered throughout the patio are actually pieces of stone which closely resemble marble. The green shrubbery is inexpensive reindeer moss imported from Norway and the bright red flowers are Everlastings.

Second-hand stores are freasare houses to a man with Lagler's imagination, but not all his purchases are used to build chalets and castles. A plaster of paris mold which he has made from a piece of broken sculpture, has produced a highly decorative lamp much of whose beauty is due to Lagler's skill in reconstructing the design of the original piece.

CURRENTLY be is furning out plaster of paris busts depicting the head and shoulders of a man and woman in 19th century These graceful figures finished in bronze, enamel and shellac in colors ranging from ivory to gold bear little resemblance to the cracked yellowpainted busts which Lagler first repaired then used as models for the original molds.

Most of these articles will gather dust in Lagler's workshop just as Grandma Moses' early paintings cluttered up her attic for years. That's all right with Lagier. He just doesn't intend to let the demands of his new activity deprive him of the satisfaction he has always gained from restoring beauty to seemingly worthless material just for the sheer joy of accomplishment,

Bank Reopenings Face Brief Delay Long Beach's Lost Weekend

Half Navy Review
City Will Greet Old Ironsides This Morning About 10 O'Clock

By Harry Karns

THIS IS ABOUT a city's lost

Lost, in the sense that things which were supposed to take place were forgotten.

Plans that were made did not come off.

Few headlines that seemed important on Friday were remembered on Monday, And if they were recalled, it was with the sense of irony felt when values are suddenly realigned by some powerful event.

The city was Long Beach, the year 1933.

And like all other cities of America, Long Beach watched with great interest the new President, Franklin D. Roose-velt. There was a bank holiday. (P. E. Hatch of the Long Beach Clearing House said local banks were ready to open "when the signal is given.") The banks and the people watched and waited and the big story was Congress and Roosevelt -- mostly Roosevelt and what he would do about the depression. . . .

IN LONG BEACH, FDR had to share the news space with the Navy. On Thursday, Morch 9, warships 130 strongof them with the U.S.S. Pennsylvania in the vanguard—staged in front of the city the greatest naval parade ever seen in American waters, The climax of this naval pageant was to come on March 10.

Old Ironsides (the U. S. F. : Constitution)—launched in 1794 and restored in 1931 through the donations of school children was docked at San Penro, Now the famous ship was to be towed to a berth at Long Beach. En route she would stop opposite the Pennsylvania, flagship of Adm. Richard H. Leigh, Then Adm. Leigh would repair to the Constitution and hoist to its main truck his four-star flag. It would be the first Admiral's flag flown from the mast of the historic frigate in 135 years!

Later, at dock in Long Beach, there would be an official greeting by Mayor Asa E. Ficklingfollowed, in the coming days, by civic ceremonies and visits to the ships by the populace. For a Navy city it was an event of paramount interest and excitement, an event to take part in and read about later in the papers. Long Beach stirred with committees and anticipation.

MEANWHILE, a civic battle raged. Scheduled for a decision at an election the following April was a proposed new city charter—and it had enemies. This night, March 10, they planned to speak out in a mass meeting at Municipal Auditorium, Long Beach, they argued, would face "certain confusion" in municipal affairs if

King Tut Still 'Packs' Em In'

KING TUTANKHAMEN'S 4,000-year-old tomb, discovered 30 years ago in the desert Valley of the Kings near Luxor, Egypt, is one of the greatest tourist attractions of the modern world. The mummy, with its gem-studded gold mask and pharoah" headdress is shown in its carved brown marble sarcophagus. Walls and vaulted ceiling of the tomb are covered with brilliant frescoes.

American Export Lines' Four A'ce passenger vessels sail fortnightly from New York to Alexandria, while the fleet sunliners S.S. Constitution and S.S. Independence make 30 crossings from New York to Naples with excellent interport transfer facilities for Alexandria at Naples.

The illustration accompanying this article shows mural of the boy king (second figure from mural left) presenting his ka or soul (center) to Osiris, god of death.
The ka carries the ankh, a looped cross symbol of life. The figures at the right are the Goddess of the Sky and behind her, the Goddess Nut, mother of Osiris.

KING TUT'S and the neighboring tombs in the parched Valley of the Kings have drawn an endless procession of visitors from every country. Nearby, on the west bank of the Nile, are Queen Hepshupet's palace, the Colossi of Mennon, Ramses temple, and other monuments man has created, among them the 400-acre Temple of Karnak and the Temple of Luxor, which ex-

The stories that were, the plans that were, the weekend that was to be, vanished in a wink that Friday evening. The time was 5:55 p. m. The earth gave a shrug and toppled the best laid plans in one of the most disastrous earthquakes of the country's history.

WHETHER THE BANKS would open on Monday did not seem very important that weekend. Nor did many concern themselves with the question whether the admiral's flag had actually flown from the mast of the old frigate. The "certain confusion" of the proposed municipal charter diminished as a civic anxiety. The clubs forgot to meet. Through tacit agreement between hosts and guests the parties were unattended.

None of these were the news on Saturday, March 11. The news was:

Casseroles Gain Seasonal Favor

By Mildred K. Flanary

DURING LENT homemakers probably will find themselves planning more casseroles as main dishes than at any other season. This is perhaps due to the fact that cheese, eggs and canned fish or seafood seem to need bulkier foods like rice, macaroni or noodles to play supporting roles.

COOKING

Souffles especially come into their own for they're an excellent source of protein, calcium, riboflavin and lactose. The "cook" takes great pride in turning out a souffle that is fluffy and beautiful to look at as well as delicious to eat - and our hostess today has just such a

Miss Rachel Morton, 1157 Freeland St., enjoys entertaining guests, and she can prepare a tasty dish with enthusiasm. Hav-ing lived and studied abroad for eight years, she brings to each occasion a continental atmosphere, rich in musical lore.

You'll like her recipe for Swiss cheese souffle, also, and it is featured elsewhere on this page to-

Egg-cheese tomato casserole is another dish which will meet with the approval of your entire family, and your guests, too. It's a meat-skipper recipe well suited to the individual baking dish treatment. If you prepare it for dinner, you'll need a vegetable or two on the side, as well as the salad, and probably a light des-sert. This recipe, and others which you'll enjoy long after the Lenten season, follow.

In a greased shallow casserole place an egg slice, overlap with a slice of cheese, then another egg slice and continue until bottom of casserole is covered and all slices have been used. Pour tomato sauce over the egg and choose and bake in a moder-? ately hot oven (375° F.) 15 minutes. Serves 4.

Home Where Orange Trees Grow

By Eileen Ball

RIGHT YELLOW stucco and chocolate board-and-batten siding create a sunny exterior for the Farn Black home, 10921 Allen Dr., Garden Grove. Set against the deep brown wood are shutters of daffodil yellow that make bright accents at the windows.

A curving driveway acts as a guest landing, where callers may step almost directly from their cars to the front door.

The interior color scheme is set in the entry. Wallpaper is soft brown tweed in contrast to a pale turquoise divider-planter of etched wood. Above the planter, living area walls of the same pale value of turquoise are visible.

FROM THE VANTAGE point of the cirry, the full beauty of the living room site is realized. The entire rear wall of the living room is glass, beyond which lies a spacious and beautifully planted garden. Growing close to the house are two large and bountiful orange trees, the vivid fruit and glossy foliage of which add much color to the interior.

Draperies of copper-colored shantung pull across the glass during hours when the sunlight is strongest. But because of the privacy of the yard, there is no necessity for their being drawn at night. After dark an interesting and dramatic effect is ereated with the spotting of lights into the trees.

STILL ANOTHER attractive exterior is reflected in the mirror hanging in the entry. From where it hangs, opposite the dining ell, it mirrors the pale oak dining set in the foreground and the cypress-enclosed patio that lies beyond the dining window.

A bevy of small occasional tables for snack-serving, a cheery fireplace and a console organ combine to make this a con-genial setting for entertaining and for relaxed family living.

The same warm cocoa tone used for incidental appointments in the living room has been in-troduced in the den. The carpet and the fabric of the sofa combine gold and fleeks of charcoal-brown with cocoa to team with moss green to set the

IN THE DEN is located the television, Mrs. Black's sewing machine and a large oak desk. Thus, this activity room is able to cater to functions that, if handled in the living room, would detract from that rooms' pleasantly relaxed atmosphere.

A SERVICE BAR separates the kitchen from the dining ell. This snack bar is usable not only for family use but for beverage service at parties. Be-tween times, it may be closed off with a folding plastic traverse screen which slides across the counter to the ceiling.

The kitchen is efficiently compact and features a pink, ivory and charcoal color grouping.

The dining set is charcoal plastic fleeked with deep pink. Paler in value are the ruffled tie-back muslin curtains of powder pink. The service counters are ivoryflecked tile which combine with the vinyl flooring of beige spatter to present a neutral background for more colorful accessories.

Prisoner of the Occupation

THE LEGIONS of Cinna, the hordes of Attila and the armies of a fellow named Eisenhower had lots of things in com-

Conquered Germany proved a trying place for a pretty fraulein named Erika Angermann of Dresden. To avoid rapine, she surrendered herself to the first. conqueror, a Russian officer. Then came the Americans and they, in their way, weren't much

But Erika must eat, James Mc-Govern relates in his new novel, 'Fraulein" (Crown, $3.50), and she is able, too, to retain something of a moral purpose in life. From some very depressing circumstances she rises to become the wife of a very rich American.

And when the time comes that she might return to her first love, a German officer of preoccupation days, Erika stays, after all, with her husband.

As interesting as the story of Erika is the story of the occupation and its attendant hysteria. --G. C. F.

A SPIRITUAL UPLIFT for the devout, particularly those of Catholic faith, is "The Living Bread" (Farrar, Straus and Cudahy, $3), in which Thomas Merton - who is Father Louis of the Order of Cistercians of the Strict Observance — is concerned with the Eucharist as sacrifice and sacrament. Catholic doctrine is expounded on a foundation of Holy Scripture, the Holy Fathers, the Council, pontifical documents and the judgments of theologians. And it is easy to see by the reading that Father Merton is inspired, for his passages are filled with the joy of the Eucharistic life as the Christian life in all its perfections.

ANTHONY POWELL'S "The Acceptance World" (Farrar, Straus and Cudahy, $3.50) is of the time of F. Scott Fitzgerald. Powell's people move in somewhat the same wierd times and places the early depression and all that sort of thing, you know. Well knit, often pretty funny story about people who either accept, or don't the loaves and fishes life has to produce. Not much recommended for folks

MARGARET SHEDD'S novel "Run" (Doubleday, $3.50) is the story of a young boy's fear. Suspected of the horrible murder of a baby, he flees to strange hiding places in the town, finally holds the lown at bay from a shack. His mother and father, long separated, are reunited at scene but not for any happy ending.

SET IN A NORTHWEST sawmill town shortly before the time of the Civil War, "The Royal Anne Tree" by Patricia Campbell (Macmillan, $3.50) is primarily the story of gentle Louise Vanc

AT THE MURDER trial some Carma crew members identified Guy as the "man at the porthole"; others were not so sure.

Crew members testified that they did not know what was in the missing Spanish note. Mrs. Wanderwell, weeping on the stand, testified that she did not know, either.

A divorced wife of Wanderwell was quoted in a press dispatch from Seattle as saying "My former husband had an arrogant way of suddenly turning on his heel and walking away when he wanted to end a conversation. Perhaps he did it once too many times."

GUY WENT TO TRIAL Feb. 2, 1932. Two weeks later the jury of nine men and three women returned a "not guilty" verdict. Jurors said they took four ballots; the first ballot stood 10 to 2 for acquittal.

Deported after the trial, Guy fought with the Loyalists in Spain and the Chinese armies in the Orient. He served six months as a flying instructor at Regina, Saskatchewan, then joined the RAF Ferry Command. In the same service was Edward De-Larm, the aviator who had furnished his alibi in the murder trial.

In December 1933, Aloha Wanderwell married Walter Baker, a former Wyoming sheepman, in Gretna, La., and in 1936 they headed the Walter Wanderwell Educational Expedition to Indochina. In the early 1940s or so, they lived for a time in Long Beach but have since dropped out of sight, as have the Wanderwell daughters, who, if they are living, now are in their 30s.

pygmies and, such a situation being outside the scope of his experience, Mr. Kodiak prudently retreated to ponder the prob-Anyway, he turned and ambled off."

The next day, the entire party, including Linsley, set out with high-powered rifles to try and locate the animal which had tested the tree-climbing prowess of the museum men. Lincoln was convinced that this particular bear fitted his specifications as the long-wanted "attention-getter" he needed to complete his Kodiak bear display.

In a few hours they spotted the giant about three-quarters of a mile away. Approaching with extreme caution, Linsley drew a bead on the monster and dropped him with the first shot.

Then came the big job of getting the massive skull, bones and hide back to civilization. The bear was skinned and skill dissected and scraped out. The thick hide was so heavy that it had to be dragged — skin side out, to protect the fur.

TREMENDOUS TEDDY was lean, just out of hiberation, and his weight of 1,190 pounds falls far short of the present record of around 1,800 pounds for giant Kediaks. His skull, though, does constitute a record for size, being 17 15/16 inches by 12 13/16 inches — the largest bear skull of which there is record. Teddy stands 8 feet, 8 inches tall on his hind legs and his reach is around 12 feet from ground to forcelaw tip when outstretched in vertical position.

The work of "reconstructing" Teddy in the museum taxidermy shop was a long, arduous and expensive task. It required more than a year to dry and tan the hide, prepare and dry the bones and skull. Another year was consumed in the work of building the armature, or simulated skeleton containing some of the animal's original bones, and in making the clay model and the fiberboard mannikin, upon which the bearskin is attached.

The cost of such a taxidermy project, for a private citizen, would be from $800 to $1,000, museum authorities estimate.

"Except for the exciting circumstances of our first meeting with Tremendous Teddy, I'm very glad to have made his acquaintance," Mel Lincoln asserts.
"He's one of the finest examples of the vanishing giant Kodiak bears ever bagged and he attracts plenty of gasp-provoking attention. What's more, Teddy's a confirmed family man now and a real credit to the Los Angeles County Museum,"

Simian Lulu With the Hula

By Eleanor Avery Price

CCT OVELY Hula Hands" and all the other rhythmic songs of the Pacific "Paradise Isles" may be fine for girls who are learning to sway and to "speak" the hula with two slim hands. But what's a girl sup-posed to do who is learning to hula when she has five hands? That's right, five hands!
The girl, Penny, is a spider monkey, and in the case of a spider monkey the feet and tail also serve as hands. To tip five hands like gull's wings bent in flight while swaying gracefully to Polynesian music really takes a bit of doing!

SO. THOUGH SHE feels as though she were all hands (and a whale of a lot of clows), Penny is learning to flat-foot two of her extremities. Her tail (and spider monkeys have the strongest tails in the monkey kingdom) just sort of follows along like a waying flower, the petals of which have been stripped off by an over-blustery Hawaiian tradewind.

When Flora received Penny as gift, it was only natural that the little monkey, a born mimic, would try to imitate her owner when Flora practiced her hula routines. In Flora's mind a bright light dawned, flamed brightly, and since then she has been teaching Penny to hula in earn-

BEFORE VERY LONG. Flora hopes to include Penny in her asional public performances. Although the hula-loving King Kalakana of days gone by and all the legendary Polynesian gods and goddesses who gave their blessings to the island dance might do a bit of ghostly writhings of their own over the idea of a monkey doing the hula, Flora wears a rosy smile-lei at owning a spider monkey endowed with the poetry of the hula dance.

Penny has a very pleasant home life. Her sleeping cage, which is kept immaculately clean, is in the garage, and Penny has full run of this building during the day when Flora is working at the Lakewood Country Club. She has a gay old time with the garden tools and the assurtment of odds and ends that usually clutter a garage, and she can lug even the heaviest things around with her strong tail.

BECAUSE SHE is inordinately fond of bathing (she gets a bath daily), and because she loves to swing on the shower rods in the house, Penny's swinging apparatus in the gavage consist of a collection of shower rods.

Penny is happiest when Flora comes home and takes her into the house where she has the run of seven rooms to explore, TV to watch, and with a little luck. an unexpected snack. Penny's taste buds drool more over marshmallows than anything else, and so Flora employs these white morsels when she is training her pal to perform an intricate hula movement.

For breakfast Penny cals a peached egg and a serving of pablum. At night her meal consists of vegetables, a cup of milk, and always a banana.

Penny is a friendly little creature and baby-talks to Flora with her dark tropical eyes held close to Flora's face as though begging to be understood. She has a merry laugh and a pathetic chattering cry when things go wrong.

A Switch to Stereo

By the Shutterbug

STEREO CAMERAS have brought a specialized field to photography, but the normal camera fan can easily adjust to stereo shooting by observing a few simple rules.

Look for foreground interest which will tie into the background. Instead of shooting broadside at your subjects, aim for a three-quarter angle so that there's something of interest extending from some point in front to the back.

However, beware of extremes. You can't shoot something two, three or four feet from the camers and let the scene stretch out to infinity.

WHEN THE closest object is, say, six feet away and the farthest object is, say, 25 feet away, the camera is generally focused at a point about one-third from the foreground, or in this example, at 12 feet. With the lens closed down a bit for more normal shooting, it would bring both foreground and background in focus.

Generally, there's no difference

tions which come packed with the film or use a light meter. Remember the standard exposure for a sunny day is 1/50 second at 16.3 with daylight type Kodachrome (ASA 10). With the new faster color films (ASA 32), the standard is 1/50 at f11.

WHEN YOU SHOOT flash indoors, the stereo camera must be set at a speed of 1/25th of a second.

For good indoor color rendition, use Kodachrome Type F film with No. 5 or No. 25 clear This combination flashbulbs, needs no color correction filter and has a guide number of 95. That means that with a little simple arithmetic, you can figure out the correct lens opening for whatever distance you are shooting. Divide the distance into the guide number, 95, and that's what the lens is set at. For instance, if your subject is six feet away, divide 95 by 6 and the correct lens opening is f16.

HOW TO Use a Screen to Add Decorative, and Utility Values to Your Home and Utility Values to Your Home

1. WITH A FOLDING screen between the two areas, privacy is added to a combination living and dining room. The silk fabric covering this screen harmonizes with the floral design of the quilted chintz sofa. You could cover a screen with patterned wallpaper for a similar effect,

2. HIDE A seldom-used door with a tall screen to match or contrast with your walls. The screen in this room, covered with eye-catching waltpaper, is high enough to cover the top of the door. Height of a screen is important to its good looks-line it up with some architectural feature.

Brilliant Birds for Your Garden

Colorful blooms of the Bird of Paradise plant offer lasting brilliance in the garden and as cut flowers.

By Bob Gilmore

ONE OF THE PLANT kingdom's most exotic flowers is the bird of paradise. Known botanically as Strelitzia reginae, this exciting ornamental is perhaps as odd as it is exotic. California is one of the few states where amateurs can grow the bird of paradise outdoors with ease and success. Elsewhere it is still very largely a rare plant. The flowers look like bigbeaked birds and this, of course, accounts for the name. The beak is blue, the accompanying floral sections yellow with a touch of red. On close examination these colors seem to blend into tones of orange, green and violet. The flowering buds, during the blooming season, appear in great profu-

Although considered a tropical plant the bird of paradise will tolerate temperatures as low as 24 degrees. The flowers appear mainly in winter and spring, remaining on the plants for a long time. Established specimens frequently produce flowers intermittently throughout the year. As cut flowers, the blooms are possessed of long life.

SHIPPING OUT flowers from this area has become a little "big business." Southern Califormia is the country's most important shipping center for "birds." They keep for weeks at a time and are extensively used for decorative purposes in public places. Their longevity and exappearance accounts for their great demand as a cut flower.

More varieties of dahlias are grown in Long Beach area than in native habitat south of the border.

By John Ronson

AHLIAS, natives of Mexico and Guatemala, thrive throughout the Southland. There is, as a matter of fact, a greater variety of dahlias in Southern California than in this plant's native habitat.

There are just about 10 different types of wild dahlia. Yet bulb catalogs frequently list hundreds of separate varieties. There are close to 2000 named varieties, with new ones being introduced each year. Some of the old-time favorites, however, still rank among the best,

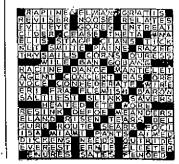

Raising dahlias should do a lot for your gardening ego. There are just a few rules to follow and prize-winning specimens will make you very happy. Recommended is a well drained toamy soil. Heavy ground having high water-retentive qualities may prove difficult. The tubers may rot even before growth gets under way.

DAHLIAS CANNOT tolerate frosts or excessively cold weather; so delay planting until the weather and soil warm up thoroughly. During the growing season, especially during the summer, dahlias want liberal quantities of moisture. When the buds appear, additional applications should be made.

The average well-balanced food should suffice for dalilias but be careful about excessive nitrogen content. Dahlias do not react favorably to foods with a great deal of nitrogen, which may lead to an excess of leaf and stem growth, sacrificing flower production.

Dahlias should be planted about six inches below the surface, the tuber in a horizontal position and the eve pointing toward the surface. Set up sixfoot stakes at the time of plant-

be close to the stake but not quite touching it. Gradually fill in the planting hole as the shoot

THE MAIN DAHLIA classes are: Single dahlias with one row of petals, usually from eight to 10 in number; cactus dablias with slender, gracefully arched petals; show dahlias, compactly built, double and globe-shaped.

The decorative dablia is midway between the cactus and show types, having broad, flat petals; the neony dahlia has an open center with not more than three rows of ray florets. Pompons are small, usually less than two inches across; the collarette is single except for a collar of small netals around the center.

AST MONTH I talked about aphii but, of course, they aren't the only garden enemies, even if they are the most notice-Thrips are invading your glads and roses and many other flowers; mildew, black spot and rust may be invisible but are nevertheless present on your roses, delphiniums, etc. And on many of your vegetables.

For that reason, I like to recommend a two-purpose spray: One that destroys destructive insects and checks fungus diseases at the same time. It isn't a good idea to have to spray too The only good a spray material can do to the plant is to relieve it of its enemies. The plant shouldn't have to take the shock of being sprayed too often. So use a spray that covers as many needs as possible and use it thoroughly, covering the entire plant and even the surrounding soil area.

week . . . Camellias are often recognized as an introduction to spring, although many varieties flower during late winter. At any rate, no California garden should be without a few of these gorgeous ornamentals. Visit your nurseryman now and examine the various types.

A second bloom will be found encased in the sheath just below the original floret. By gently opening the casing the second Hower can be maneuvered into place. In this way a single spike will last twice as long as might

EXPERTS DIFFER as to the best location for the bird of paradise. Some claim full sun is essential while others recommend partial shade. The best compromise, of course, is to plant in full sun along the coastal regions and in partial shade inland. In the hot, interior regions, the "birds" should be protected from excessive heat by planting in filtered sunlight.

Inadequate drainage or lack of moisture may cause the plants to A rich soil plus fairly liberal quantities of moisture are essential. During the winter season you should gradually reduce the amount of water; this is especially true for plants grown your flower border. These plants have a very aspiring habit of growth, shooting up to a rather impressive height. If planted near the front of the border they will hide from view the smaller growing várietics.

If sufficient room is available, try a few berry plants. They may be trellised across your backyard fence. Be sure to plant a few bushes of Boysenberry. This is a real treat in eating.

His Job's in the Air

By Dick Friend

THOMAS NIELSEN probably has been blamed for "making it rain" more than any other man in Long Beach.

Nielsen, 57, is a window washer.

"Every place I go, peering into some 11th story window, or balancing on a ledge 50 feet abovethe ground, someone tells me that it's bound to rain because I just washed the window panes," Nielsen lamented.

A window washer for 37 years, Nielsen said he would just as soon climb out on a window ledge 200 feet above the floor as walk across Pine Ave.

"IT'S A LOT SAFER up there all by yourself," he claims.

But Nielsen admits that he wasn't a tall-building man from the beginning. He started on the second floor of a downtown building in 1925, and worked himself to the top, floor by floor.

"Now," he sayş, "I'd tackle a New York skyscraper without even counting the floors,"

Biggest hazard to the window washer is loose hooks, special metal catches installed outside of most tall buildings. The washers slip their safety belts into one end of the hooks, swing out on the window ledge and fasten the other end of their

A MYSTERY unfolded at one Long Beach building several years ago when two washers were injured in falls. The building hooks just snapped out after the washers were sccurely in

"We found that each man who worked on the building unlatched his belt at one side and turned the opposite hook over for freer movement when slepping from one window to the next," Nielsen "The hooks were screwed

Thomas Nielsen started as second-floor man, gradually worked his way up.

into the building and, after years of being unscrewed a half turn at a time, they had just plain come

"Now, all of these hooks are riveted into place," he said.

One down town department store presents a special prob-lem; he said. The windows are too large for a single belt and windows are separated by large pillars. The washer must teeter on a ledge, throw one end of his belt to a partner at another window and swing around the cement pillar to the window.

"MY WIFE used to object to my job," Neilsen said. "But that was when we were first married. Now, she just considers it a job as I do."

Neilsen, who works for the Pacific Window Cleaning Co., said the Wilton Sky Room is the highest spot in town where he renders his services. It is about 15 stories high on the ocean side.

The room equipped with permanently closed windows offers a few added thrills, Neilsen said. It's a two-man job.

"YOUR PARTNER goes on top of the building and fastens a long rope in a hook on the roof. Then with one end tied around your middle like a mountain climber, you swing from window to window, just barely touching your toes on the ledge as you

The partner then lowers the window washer's equipment — a bucket of water, two squeegees, a sponge, a chamois and a brush.

"People always ask me how I can stand working up in the air like that." Neilsen said. "It's like that," Neilsen said. just like anything else. I got used to it."

"AND IT'S nice work," Neilsen said. "You meet all kinds of people while cleaning their win-A pilot at the Wilton even invited me to take an airplane ride with him, but I turned him down.

"I don't think I'd like it 'way up in the air like that," Neilsen commented.

"I'll just stay here on the ground."

Murmurs of Appreciation

RNIE GLASER'S Chandelier Restaurant — certainly one of Long Beach's most beautiful showplaces — presents two items of decor which never fail to bring murmurs of appreciation from the guests.

These two items are hostesses Vicky Dyer, a lovely blonde, and Kathy Burns, a lovely brunette. Dressed in chic French maid costumes, they are Paris personified as they escort the patrons to their tables. Glaser, the owner of this fashionable Parisian restaurant at 4205 Atlantic Ave. is no slouch either in the costume department.

Glaser, a man with a lively imagination, constantly thinks up new, spectacular dishes for the amazement and pleasure of his patrons. His flaming delicacies are always exotic. Recently he added another original to his menu — a lobster and steak gourmet's dinner for $3.75. This consists of half a sweet Australian lobster tail with melted butter and half a Chandelier steak with mushroom sauce. This specialty is served with a large salad, baked potato with cheese sauce and chives, assorted continental breads and choice of bev-

FOR LENT, the Chandelier features scrumptious Sea Food Mardi Gras, an elaborate mixture of ocean delicacies. It's $2.75, complete. For hudget-minded guests, the Chandelier offers a wonderfully impressive and delicious planked, chopped sirloin dinner for $2.25.

In the entertainment department, the Chandelier is par excellence. Currently featured are the splendid voice of Gordon Wheatley, accompanied by accordionist-pianist Vina Mae Hermer; French singer Mademoiselle Lili and strolling violinist Sid Bruszer.
